1 Have a picnic on a private beach

This date is a bit extravagant, but hey, sometimes you really need to spoil the pants off your partner. It is also going to take some planning, but will be worth it in the end. So here's what you do, you need to find a beach somewhere near you or on a map, which can only be accessed via boat (look for bays).

Then pack a picnic, include all their favourites in that and make sure you pack some materials to make a fire (some matches too would help!). Then you need to take them out for the day and find somewhere that you can rent a boat from (make sure you check how long you can have it for). Then pack yourself and your partner into the boat and head to your secret beach.

Once you are there you can unpack the picnic and start to have some fun, if it is a bit cold then get the fire going, or just use it as an excuse to snuggle up close!

Then enjoy your own private beach for the day, play around in the sea make sure to throw your partner in it (maybe wait until you're just about to leave before you do that). You could take along some games to play, maybe a Frisbee or ball, just enjoy the time together in your own private little oasis.

Then once you have finished you can head back to where you rented the boat from and then back into the hustle and bustle of everyday life. Once you've done this once you now have your own private beach which you can return to whenever you like, how about next time staying the night snuggled up in your own tent or just on the beach looking up at the stars with the sound of the waves to compliment the romantic evening? (You need to make sure you can rent a boat overnight first or buy your own - and please make sure you secure the boat up somewhere so it doesn't float away and strand you!).

2 Design Trouble

Design something together at your kitchen table, or just on the floor - grab two drawing pads, and a whole pack of coloring pencils, along with some erasers. Set a timer for however long you think - ten minutes usually works. Then, sit back and design a building, a home... anything. Maybe a skyscraper, or a hospital, or even a rock band!

When time's up, stop drawing and look at each other's pictures. Laugh at the odd, silly, and simply bad designs, and compliment on points you do like. It can be a fun adventure - do it several times, and see who gets better, add a glass of wine and some music for a lovely night in.

3 Animal Shelters

Find a local animal shelter and go down for an afternoon of fuzzy fun. Give love to the poor animals without a home or family, and spend some time with them. Even the most hardened people melt at the sight of animals.

If you really want to impress your partner with what a loving person you are then you can call beforehand and see what sort of treats and donations they accept - buying a bag of dog or cat food, along with a big bag of bones, can really hold you up in their eyes. They'll see you as a caring person, and you'll get time to give love to some great animals that really deserve it.

4 Try Painting

Painting is a skill that not many people have - chances are, neither of you will either. See if you can find a painting class in your town, and take your partner for a session. Make sure to sit close together too, so you're not across the room and all alone making a fool out of yourself. This isn't supposed to be serious learning; have fun with it, and make fun of each other's attempts at art.

If you live in an area where there isn't a class, just go down to a craft store, buy some thick paper, and a cheap set of water colors. At the end of the date you can even see how those colors look on each other, too!

5 Quiet Picnic for Two

This is something they'll find special, if you do it right - if not, it can be a little off the wall. First, you'll need to head to a bookstore and flag down a worker. See if they can recommend the most romantic book of poetry they have there, and if not, at least point you towards a good selection.

While you're there, see if you can find a good cookbook with ideas for picnic food. Choose a light lunch, and an easy-but-delicious dessert, and keep the name in mind. Search for a similar recipe online, and then cook!

The final result is you sitting over a homemade picnic lunch in a park, eating and reading romantic poetry to each other. Sound soppy? Maybe - sometimes it is good to just let yourself be soppy and enjoy the moment!

6 Blinded By... Cake?!

If this is set up right, it can be a lot of fun! You'll need cake batter, and all of the ingredients to make it. Batter from the box works fine, though if you aim to impress, you could find a recipe for homemade cake online to follow.

Then, take turns blindfolding each other, and mixing the ingredients. Feel the texture and heat of the cake batter as your hands warm it up, experience how it is without looking at it or knowing what to expect.

Then, bake the cake! When it's finished, you can take turns again decorating them blindfolded. If you want cupcakes, you could have a contest, and whoever's decorations are the best wins a prize - it could be something simple, like a night of pampering, or something more intimate and romantic.

7 Music Makes Me Sing

Everyone loves the theatre - call around, and see if there are any musicals at local or national theatres. Make sure to dress up when you go, and if you don't usually like these but are doing it for your partner then let him/her know that you want to go, not that it's just something you're doing for them (even if it is!).

Take them out to dinner before if you're going to an evening showing, or after if it's a matinee. You don't need to choose the best restaurant in the area, but picking a decent one is important. Make sure you have plenty of time if you're going before, because nobody likes to eat rushed.

Hold their hand throughout the show, and if it's a local theatre, you might be able to wait in the lobby afterwards and meet the actors, or even get their autographs. Try to be an attentive partner throughout the night, and you'll make them feel great as you are sharing what they enjoy!

8 Cold Winters Night

Is it a cold, winters night and you don't know what to do with yourself? No worries - it's not as bad as you think! Instead of moping around the house, do something that you'll both enjoy.

Stoke up your fireplace as you ask them to make you some warm drinks. Coffee, while often a crowd favorite, isn't as nice as you might think on a cold night. Something tasty like hot chocolate makes you feel warm for a long time, while tea has a bitter sweet taste that lasts.

Grab a book that you're been meaning to read, but haven't yet - or a favorite you've been wanting to read again. Several blankets should be used to cover and cuddle under, and take turns reading passages or even chapters to each other.

Afterwards, offer to make them dinner - or do it as an after dinner treat, and retire to bed feeling warm, comfortable, and content.

9 Modifications

Go through your closet, and find all of your old clothes. Head to the craft store, and arm yourself with supplies. You'll want needles, thread (If you have a sewing machine, you won't need these, of course. Though you will need the sewing machine!), dye for tie dying things, sharp scissors, and even some different fabric choices for patches.

Then, take it all home, and have your partner add their clothing into the pile. Then, start modifying! Cut the sides up on that old t-shirt of yours, and cut strips out of the sides - sew them back together, and give it to your partner to remember you by. Add some hot pink and plaid patches to those old jeans, and cut off the arms and tie dye that old dress shirt. Go wild!

Afterwards, take them out to dinner and wear your new, funky clothing. Somewhere nice, but not too nice - you never know, they might throw you out!

10 Sidewalk Talk Chalk

Head to just about any store, and grab a big old bucket of sidewalk chalk. You can find it just about anywhere - from the dollar store to a Wal-Mart, and you can usually find it in big pieces, with a lot of colors.

Then, take a seat on the sidewalk. If you have a patio, you can use that - your art won't be on display then, too, which is good if you're a bit embarrassed of your skills (Or lack thereof).

Doodle just about anything. Cars, trees, flowers, houses - the sidewalk's the limit. Really have fun with it, and don't be afraid.

Afterwards, take your partner out to a nice, quiet dinner and talk about all the fun activities that you did as a kid.

11 House of Cards

Let's hope your relationship is more stable than your house!

Go online, and print out as much information on building a house of cards as you can. While some people almost naturally know how to do it, most of us have no idea of the building blocks that go into it, only what the final product looks like.

Grab at least three decks of cards, if not more, and start crafting your very own house of cards. See how big you can make it, before it comes tumbling back down, and even have a card-off to see who can make the biggest house of cards in one amount of time.

Afterwards, take them out for a nice dinner and laugh about the horrible - or beautiful - houses of cards that you've made. It's fun, and you'll be able to unleash your childish side.

12 Old to New

Go to an auction, or an old used store - grab an old piece of furniture. You can get just about anything, but wood is recommended. A table is the easiest, but chairs, and other forms of furniture work as well.

Then, check it out. Is it all wood? Does it have fabric? The rougher the condition, the better. If you're going to buy a like-new piece, there's no point in it!

Head to the hardware store, and buy paint stripper to strip the wood. You'll need a few putty knives, too, and remember to buy paint. If you've got fabric, you could even try your hand at reupholstering it!

Then, get to work! Spend the entire day on your project, and see if you can get done in just one sitting. Afterwards, reward them for their hard work by taking them out to a nice, relaxing dinner.

13 Scuba, Scuba

Ever want to see fish up close and personal? Dying for a chance to check out some wonderful, exciting new underwater experiences? Or have you just seen the scuba divers and deep-sea swimmers, and thought about how awesome it would be to do what they do?

Well... you don't have to just wish, or dream, of doing it. And you certainly don't have to do it alone - share it with your partner, and find out just how fun it can be.

Chances are, there is a place very, very close to you that will give you both comprehensive lessons on the basics, and advanced points, of scuba diving. They'll probably be spread over quite a bit - several weeks or months - so you both have an excuse to get together, no matter what.

After you've finished your lessons, and earned a certificate, surprise them with a trip down to a nice, warm place - like Hawaii - where you can do serious, hardcore scuba diving, and discover some wonderful, beautiful things. They'll adore it - trust me. It's something that any scuba nut would love.

14 Yoga

Head to the bookstore, and grab a beginners book on Yoga. You could take one out at a library, but you'll only be able to have it a short time - and it might not be an up to date copy, which is fairly important.

Then, make sure to grab two yoga mats - you can probably find them just about anywhere these days, save the corner convenience stores (It's just a matter of time, you know!). While you can just use the floor, the mats not only make it easier, but give you a designated space.

Then, take everything home. Then, the next morning, drag them over to your house (or out of bed) before breakfast - have your yoga book set up and ready, and start learning your yoga poses. Make fun of your partner when they have trouble, and make sure to take it lightly. You won't get everything right on the first try.

Afterwards, treat them to a homemade breakfast and a nice conversation. Read up about Yoga, and its origins, before you start, so that you'll have a good topic to discuss. You'll also look smart knowing so much!

15 Juggle

Take your partner to the library, and take out as many books as you can find on juggling. Yes, it sounds easy - throwing balls in the air, catching them, and throwing them again. Don't think that it's as easy as you're presuming, though. People practice decades to be professionals, and you might not be able to get it down in a few hours.

Grab some juggling balls (If you can't buy real juggling balls, a small, soft ball will work. You can grab some at just about any store), six will do, and take everything - along with your partner - back to your home. Sit down and start trying to master the art of juggling!

Don't take this date too seriously... it's fun, and they'll love doing it. But getting frustrated will ruin both of your moods.

Afterwards, make dinner and invite your friends over. Demonstrate your amazing skills, and toss balls into their food or glasses!

16 Climb

Like rock climbing, but too afraid to try it on an actual sheer cliffside? Aren't we all! Well, before you go falling off a mountainside, learning how to rock climb properly is important.

You can probably find a good rock wall near you - Google it, or look in the paper, for a place near you. Take your date down for the day, and learn proper safety, how to climb in real situations, and what to do to improve your skill. On your next date, take them to a real rock climbing experience. Just make sure to do it safely.

After both dates, take them out for a quiet dinner - they've had enough excitement with being 50 feet above the ground, holding on for dear life, with only a short rope promising a safe return to the area below.

17 I Can See into the Future

Hop online, and print out as many things as you can on Palm Reading. Can't find much, or don’t understand what is there? Some websites are directed at the experienced palm reader, and you might have trouble understanding it.

Go to the library, and see if you can find a decent book on palm reading. If not there, the bookstore should have something. The end result should be quality information on how to read your own palm, and others.

On a quiet night in, pull out your information and try to read each other's palms - from what the lines mean, to what you're supposed to do in life, and even how long you're going to live.

Have fun with it, and make some wild predictions - perhaps that they'll spend the rest of their life with you? Make sure to enjoy yourself!

Afterwards, make them a nice, quiet dinner, and talk about how you believe - or don't believe - in things like reading palms, psychics, and more.

18 Go Kart, Go

Looking for a fun date that you can do by yourself, or with a group of friends tagging along? Going go-karting is the answer - it can be a blast, and as long as you're willing to come in second place sometimes, you can't beat the fun.

A g- kart is a sort of like a small ATV, with bars to hold you in, and a gas powered engine that really goes when it needs to. You go around a short track, and race to see who's going to win. While it's not as popular as it was, it's a lot of fun.

Drag your partner out for a night of fun! Take them to a go-kart track and race a few laps - then go out to an arcade, laser tag, or another fun, light activity. Finish it off with a fun dinner, and it'll be a date that's full of laughs.

19 Chocolate Making

Go to a chocolate making workshop - really, there is something called a chocolate making workshop, and it's a lot of fun to do. Plus, you learn something - that's important, too.

Search online and see if you can find one in your area. Chances are, no matter where you live, there's going to be a workshop somewhere near you.

What exactly do you learn in a chocolate making workshop? Well, not only do you discover how chocolate starts out, but you learn the history and creation of the gourmet chocolate. See how they make truffles, fudge, and more.

Then, at the end, you get to make your own, personal chocolates - you have a ton to choose from, and you can cut, cook, and dip almost anything you desire. Take it home, eat it up, and laugh about your deliciously entertaining day.

20 Deep Hearted Poems

Take an afternoon and get together with your partner. Sit down somewhere comfortable, and decide that you will both write a love poem – spend a lot of time on it, and really put your feelings down, no matter how awkward it may seem. Then, surprise them by cooking a meal for them (Or cook it together), and sit down over your meal to read them.

Remember to respect the feelings your partner puts into the poem, and the thoughts that he/she expresses, and only laugh if it is supposed to be funny! If you're a bit insensitive, you can do more harm than good. The more wine you drink, naturally, the more fun you'll have. Balance a romantic night with an enjoyable one, and you'll come out with a winner every time.

21 Art Museum

Spend a few hours at an art museum, and make fun of the paintings and sculptures. Try to pose as – or mock! - the person in the art, and take turns creating odd and unique stories based on what's in front of you – go crazy, and do silly things that will make them laugh. Really enjoy yourself, and don't try to be anything but you.

Remember, however, to be respectful to those that are coming and seeing the art, not those that are just there to make fun of it. Many have a great appreciation, and you wouldn't want your good time to ruin the others in the museum. You can both have fun, and be respectful.

22 Origami

Grab a book from a library, or buy one at a store, and try to see if you can master origami. Make sure to buy colorful paper, and have a lot of extras, as it's easy to make a few mistakes with it. If you can't find any books, try searching online for basic tools and tips.

See which one of you is better at the ancient art of paper folding, and be sure to make fun of each other's efforts... after all, the first time you try, you're going to be pretty bad. If you do one that's especially well made, give it to them as a reminder of the wonderful day you spent with each other. They're sure to keep and cherish it.

23 Odd shopping

Go to the grocery store, and buy some of the most random food you can find – anything from squid to dill flavored potato chips. Try things you've never eaten before, and the most exotic food you can find in the entire store. Make sure to only grab about a meals worth, though!

Take it back to your home and try to cook it up. Have fun trying your new and odd food out, and you might find a new favorite. Remember to have the number for Chinese or pizza takeout handy, though, as the meal may end up being a complete bust!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

24 At Home Picnic

Lay out a blanket in the living room after moving furniture, and put on quiet music. You can put candles around, and make a picnic indoors, complete with eating on the floor and everything. If you have a lot of stuff in your living room, try to clean up first. Throw your excess junk in a box if you have to, and toss it in the closet – or just a dark corner!

If you're not too much of a chef, consider an inside-outside picnic, where you order takeout and enjoy it instead of homemade meals. It's a fun way to spend a day, and if you don't have a lot of cash for an extravagant date, this could be something they'll appreciate.

25 Children's Story Time

Sit down for an afternoon and make a children's story up – spend time considering good ideas, and agree on your choices before you start jotting things down. Remember to make it age appropriate, and really pay attention to the dialog. Then, each of you can take a section and illustrate it as best you can! No matter if you're good or bad, it's still hours of enjoyment. Don't forget to have plenty of colored pencils and sheets of paper lying around!

The next day, go to your local hospital and spend time with the children reading them your story. Leave them a copy of the fun book, and you're not only helping out the kids – which puts you as a hero in their eyes – but having a ton of fun.

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

26 Homemade Frisbee Golf

If you have a large backyard with trees, or live near a park with trees, this is the perfect game to relive your childhood and really have fun with one another. Tie a colored ribbon to a few different trees, and decide what number each 'hole' is. You can mark them with a large marker, tape a piece of paper to them, or just call them in order (from the left to the right, for example) so you always know what hole is what.

Then, take the Frisbee and see how few throws it takes you to hit the colored ribbon. Hit them directly, and those wimpy, half hits don't count. Write it down, and whoever has the least throws at the end of the game wins! It's a great way to stay outside and just have fun with each other.

27 Opera Music

Attending an opera isn't something that you do every weekend - so being able to go to one is something they'll find incredible, and very special. Dress up in your best clothes, and make sure that they know that they should, too!

Take your partner out to dinner first, and don't skimp - you'll look ridiculous if you walk into somewhere like Sonic or McDonalds looking like that, so choose a nice, higher class restaurant. If you are the guy then make sure to open the doors, and hold her chair for her. You'll like a gentleman, and she'll feel like a queen.

If you don't like opera then don't complain as you're sitting through the opera. You might find it boring, yes... you might want to just lean back a bit and close your eyes, sure... but don't! They need you there to make the night extra special, so be attentive, and at least try to enjoy it. It might not be quite as bad as you're expecting.

28 Puzzle Piece

Take your partner to a toy store - after playing with all of the toys that you can find, head to the game section. Somewhere around there should be jigsaw puzzles - you know, those old things you did when you were a child on a rainy day?

Grab at least one puzzle, if not two or three. It's best to grab an easier puzzle, a slightly harder puzzle, then a really challenging puzzle so that you have something to do if you get frustrated with the hard one.

You can also grab some puzzle glue, if you can find it. This will let you save your final product - the puzzle - to remember.

Take it all home, and sit down to your puzzle. Talk while you both work out where the pieces fit - you can really talk about anything. It's a great way to get to know one another without having to talk.

Afterwards, either order take out and keep working, or take them to a nice, fun restaurant - they just sat for a few hours in the same seat, putting pieces together. Something exciting would be a change of pace.

29 Watch You Don't Fall Over...

This date is an old classic, heading over to an ice rink to slip and slide around the rink while holding on to your partner desperately or having them hold onto you why you both attempt to skate!

Most of us will never be out to skate properly (although there are always some people there who can and like to emphasize that point!) but we all like to do something different and sometimes it can be fun just to be cold and a little unsettled as we try to do something not very good at together laughing and joking all the time as we almost fall over constantly!

Make sure afterwards you treat your date to a hot cup of cocoa ex Commissioner

30 Own Any PJ's?

Not every date has to be actually involve any actual activities, sometimes the best date that you can give you all partner is the date of freedom from responsibilities.

Do you own any pajamas ?

If not then buy some! Otherwise wake up in the morning and inform your partner that you are both going to have a lazy day where you do not get out of your pajamas for the whole day!

Spend a whole day watching TV, reading the paper, talking and teasing each other, and basically being lazy without any guilt!

31 Some Messy Autumn Fun (and helpful too!)

This date allows you to get something done as well as have some fun in the process!

Take your date out into your backyard on a crisp, warm autumn day, both of you grab a rake and start to rake up the leaves into a big pile. Once you finish the whole yard and have a nice neat pile somewhere in your backyard, then take your partner by his or her hand and both run and jump into the pile of leaves!

Roll about in the leaves throw them at each other and basically laugh and be silly until you both fall down exhausted on your backs and then watch the clouds pass over you in the clear sky as you get your breath back.

You know what is coming now don't you?

Now you need to rake the leaves back up again! This time keep them in a pile and deal with them however you normally would (bag it or burn it!).

32 Take To The Water

Some people like the water and others hate it, but there is something alluring about a nice still lake which causes people to get out there and get some sailing in.

Take your partner to the nearest lake that gives sailing lessons and have a half a day of sailing lessons to get used to a small boat. This gives you the chance to learn a new skill and also to work together a change in achieving a common goal (not sinking or capsizing!). Then once you have that little bit of skill take the rest of the afternoon off to explore the lake yourself, maybe stop off for some food as well.

Make sure you enjoy the simple pleasure of sailing gracefully along while the sun sets over the still water of the lake.

33 Get Risqué

Sometimes it is exciting to do something naughty together! Try reading an erotic story together...

Not only may you get some ideas from it (or just build up some passion between you as you read it which has to be released) but it will form a bond between you as you have both done something 'naughty' together.

Try to make it a real erotic story not some Mills & Boon kind of story!

34 Have Some Fun At A Friends Expense...

Practical jokes can be hilarious, but only if they are not happening to you or your partner!

If you have the key to a friend's house then work together to play a joke on them. One of you needs to distract that friend for an hour or two, by taking them out of the way somewhere to do something more inviting them round to your house to have a chat or drink.

Then the other person can go round to their house and let themselves in and then do a very subtle things to the house which will drive them crazy. Try to hard boil all of their eggs in the fridge and then put them back! Move things around but leave them in the same sort of place to drive them crazy - you get the idea!

35 Have A Cushy Debate

Sometimes a great way to spend time together is to make something together!

This means you get to learn something new, have the satisfaction of making something and also have a souvenir to remember the date with! Nip to the local market for a local store and buy some stuff being and some material as you are going to make your own cushions!

You will need to read up online how to make your cushions and then decide how you are going to decorate them and what size they are going to be. You could decorate them with letters on the front to spell things or cut out shapes like teddy bears for her or tribal designs for him.

You might want to make a number of small cushions or you could make one large, soft cushion which you can both use to snuggle up on next time you are on the sofa!

36 Relax In Style

Find a place near you that will take you on a horse and carriage ride. Experience this old world mode of transport which for some reason is regarded as one of the most romantic ways to travel.

Enjoy the sights together from a more relaxed view point than from your car so you can appreciate their true beauty, take the time to look at things you normally take for granted. Bask in the glory of the sun as you are transported around the local area in style!

Then afterwards get them to drop you off and enjoy a picnic together in a local park.

37 Borrow A Pet...

Has yet ever wanted a pet of your own, but have never been allowed to get one?

How about borrowing one?

Do a good deed and also have fun in the process by borrowing a friend's pet for the day! Tell them you are going to help them out by looking after their dog/monkey/anything cute for the day. In reality all you want to do is play with the pet all-day!

Once you have secured the pet then take them out through the day and spoil them rotten with attention and play! You and your partner will have a great time enjoying all the perks of having a pet yet with very few of the drawbacks.

Then when you are exhausted at the end of the day and have had your fill return the pet to its rightful owner who can look after it now you tired out!

38 Head Out Into the Unknown

Get a map of your local area that extends out about 15 - 20 miles in every direction, draw circle round it at 20 miles from your home, then close your eyes and stick a pin in the map somewhere in that circle. That is where you are going to go and explore today!

Take a picnic along with you and go have fun, if you run out of things to do there then repeat the process again!

39 Jump Off A Cliff (Please don't try without reading this!)

Have you ever jumped off a cliff?

I mean skydiving is one thing, jumping out of a plane with an instructor watching over you and plenty of time to open your chute, but BASE jumping is something on a whole new level!

Basically what you do is strap a parachute to your back, and then find yourself a suitable cliff or high ledge and jump off it! (deploying your parachute on the way down!)

Do not attempt this without professional help but thrills are guaranteed!

40 Get Some Fresh Air

Again, sometimes it is the simple pleasures in life that please us the most.

Grab some sensible boots and your partner and head out into the great outdoors for a hike together. You get exercises, fresh air, time to clear your mind and your senses together and a change of scenery - powerful stuff!

41 Gain Some Tasty Skills

Is either of your a gourmet chef? Well it is never too late to start learning!

Have fun taking a cooking class together, let's face it, only the mega rich don't need to cook, the rest of us need to know how to cook unless we settle for microwave meals which are ok once in a while but should not be your staple diet!

You also shouldn't rely on your partner too much to cook, or let your partner rely on you if it is you doing the cooking! You both need to be able to cook in case the other is away!

So find a local college that will give you a few lessons and have some fun while you learn some great skills.

Then try those skills out on a romantic meal for two later on!

42 Have A Very Special Day

Surprise your partner with a very special day dedicated to them, an 'I adore you' day where you spend the whole day pampering them.

Maybe you have been putting off doing something with them recently, well do it on this day! If they always cook then cook for them, get them a card to really make the day 'official' and of course they need a present to open!

Look after them and you never know they may declare an 'I adore you' day on you soon! ;)

43 Get Naughty

Ok, so if you did the other date with the erotic story then you are exploring your 'naughty' side and now we are going to bam it up a notch.

Ever watched an x-rated movie together? If your partner is up for it then do it!

How about studying the Kama Sutra together? Or visiting a sex shop? Then purchasing some things to spice up your bedroom antics and actually using them?

Little things like this that push your comfort zone or the zone of your day to day life and the things that you really remember and can laugh about in years to come! Who knows - you may find toys or activities that you really enjoy and want to continue with!

44 Fancy Something Outrageous?

This date is all about making complete fools of yourself and not caring!

Head into town and buy disguises, this could be joke glasses and a green wig, or it could be something more subtle like a bad wig and some fake buck teeth!

Then head around town for the day and see who recognizes you, if you are wearing lots of disguise and people don't recognize you then you can spend the day winding up your friends without them even knowing it's you!

Follow people round, act like an idiot, just generally have fun being totally weird for a day!

45 Have Fun Firing Paint At Each Other...

Paintballing is great fun - yet to run around and pretend you're in the army while ring your enemies with harmless (yet painful) bullets of paint!

You may not think that you will get into this but I can assure you that when those little bullets of paint start whizzing round your head you will very soon get into the spirit of things and before you know it you'll be having the time of your life!

They have some great games to play, including little villages that you get to defend or attack, open forest to stalk each other through, some even have army vehicles to use and castles and other buildings that they have built especially to hide in and pepper enemy from!

Just make sure you have a reasonable level of fitness before you attempt this as I am quite fit and I usually ache for a few days afterwards!

46 Take To The River

Grab yourself two rubber rings, find yourself a safe bit of the river (preferably where it does not lead to rapids or too little water for etc!). Then make sure you have two cars (or take a bus leaving one) and drive both cars to gain a place further down the river, then drive one of the cars back with both of you in it to where you started.

Then change into some swimwear and jump into the river with your rubber ring and climb on to it so you're sitting on it, then write the river to your awaiting car!

Have fun along the way he pulling your partner with their rain and having a water fight or just relax and take in the scenery as you drift along. Disclaimer, make sure you know how to swim and it is a safe river before you try this!

47 Laugh Yourselves Silly

We all love jokes, but even the most seasoned comedian will run out after a little while!

So take a day out to make your partner laugh themselves silly, add to your local library and get out all the books on jokes and funny stories that you can, maybe even higher out some funny DVDs if you can.

Then headed back home and grab yourselves a smoothie and watched the DVDs or read out the cheesy jokes to each other and laugh at how good/bad they truly are!

Just think of all the great jokes you going to be up to tell at work the next day after this!

48 Dog Racing

Have you ever been to watch dog racing?

It is an exhilarating sport where dogs are released from a starting point and chased a fake rabbit around a circular course as fast as they can. You bet on the dog who will cross the finish line first.

It is a great atmosphere as everyone is rooting for their dog to win and there is lots of noise and atmosphere, not to mention the fact that you have the opportunity to win lots of money which always gives a night an edge of excitement!

You properly won't win any money but with small bets it is a cheap and fun night, you can have food at the course and it will definitely you will remember!

49 Learn To Surf

Surfing is cool!

But learning to surf is hard! Head down to the beach for the day and try to find somewhere that will give you some surf lessons.

They usually take a couple of hours to give you the basics, you will get a surfboard and a wetsuit given to you to use for that time so all you need to do is turn up!

You will get taught on the beach exactly how to use the board and how to stand and then you get taken out into the surf to try out yourself, don't expect to stand on the board for very long!

But if you enjoy it then you can get more lessons and you will be standing up and surfing properly in no time (not to mention you get to be a cool surfer guy/chick!).

50 Paint In An Unusual Way...

We've all seen the normal kind of painting right?

How about splatter painting? This could be construed as a modern art because basically all you do is take a blank canvas and then throw paint at it!

It is a great stress reliever and you would be surprised at how artistic the final result can look! Some people use water balloons full of paint or other objects to get the paint onto the canvas, but any method is fair game, maybe even use painted parts of your body (I'm talking hands and feet here!) to add to your artistic piece.

Try making a piece together and then either taking it to an art gallery to get their opinion or trying to sell it to a friend and seeing their face!

51 Grab A Compass & Have A Challenge

Orienteering can be a fun activity. You can either do this yourself (design a course and let your partner go round it with you) or join a challenge near you.

The basic idea here is to use a compass and map to find clues hidden around towns/cities/forests etc. Once you find a clue it will lead you on to the next by giving you landmarks to find, directions, or riddles to solve.

If you are going to do this yourself then at the end of the challenge you can hide a picnic (you need to find some way to stop the wildlife getting in while you are out on the challenge) at the end with the last clue as a welcome surprise and much-needed sustenance at the end of a long walk.

52 Head To An Air Show

Air shows are great, you get to see the acrobatics of stunt pilots, the sheer power of bombers and fighters, the speed of jet fighters, the audacity of wing walkers and everything in between.

There is generally a lot to see with all sorts of displays both on and off the ground. You can get some cheap food while you are there and try and grab a place to lie down to enjoy the day and not have to crick your neck to see the planes!

Take some binoculars if you can, not much good for the jet fighters, but invaluable for everything else!

53 Have A Quiet Night In

Okay, this is a great date, very gentle and relaxed it is also very loving and intimate at the same time.

Take some time out together to have a quiet meal and then at once and gentle music make sure the heating is high so you're both nice and warm, grab a good book each, and then sit at either end of the sofa (or lying in each other's arms) and read your own book by your partner reads theirs.

Take time out to play footsie with them as you read and to let them catch you gazing at them adoringly!

Then later on retire to the bath to continue reading!

54 On Yer Bike!

Riding a bike can be great fun, whether you are just taking a leisurely cycle around town on a crisp spring morning for the fun of it, to really trying hard to cycle 10 miles to shed some pounds together.

Go out on a bike ride together (hire a bike if you don't have any) and have some fun, have a gentle race, explore areas you haven't been before because you were stuck in a car or walking and couldn't be bothered to travel that far, then find the steepest hills you can to go down to finish off!

55 Take Some Horse Riding Lessons Together

Horses are strange creatures, not quite 'pets', they are powerful and graceful animals that people love to keep and look after (which is hard work trust me!).

If you love horses then you have to convince your partner about this date... but if your partner loves horses, then arrange some horse riding lessons and go along with them for lessons yourself!

They will love the fact you know what they like and are willing to participate even though you don't particularly like horses!

You never know, you may find out you really enjoy it!

56 World Record Holders?

How about trying to break a world record? (oh c'mon, there are records in there like the most broken eggs with your feet in one minute!)

Seriously - it doesn't have to be anything hard, how about eating baked beans with a cocktail stick?

Just contact the Guinness Book Of World Records people and tell them what you are planning to do (www.guinnessworldrecords.com) and they will respond back telling you if there is a record already and what you need to do to beat it, or if there isn't a record they will tell you if they are interested in making one and then set some rules for you.

If you do get the go ahead to either beat a current one or make one yourself, then you will need to wait for an auditor to be free to come and supervise you, but in the meantime get practising!

Either work together to get one of you a record or try something that involves a couple so you both get one.

57 Have A Kinky Weekend…

Wait for your partner to get home on a Friday night, make them dinner and let them unwind for a bit. Then when they have relieved the stresses of the day pull out your 'Naughty Weekend Kit'!

This should include things like chocolate body paint, rose petals, handcuffs, coupons you made for things you can do to each other, bubble bath, sexy underwear etc, oh and a 'do not disturb sign'!

You see also within the kit should be details of your reservation at a hotel not far from your house, but far enough to make it an adventure. Your partner will be thrilled at this little naughty adventure when they thought you were just having a normal weekend together…

Head off that night to the hotel and enjoy your weekend together!

58 Go Back To The Dark Ages

The mediaeval times have always fascinated me, and apparently I am not alone with the amount of people that visit castles in the UK every year!

Take the time to find a Mediaeval Reenactment day near you that you can go to. You get to enjoy a day of simple but wholesome food (pig roasts etc) and get to see the spectacle of knights in shining armor facing off against each other, jousting competitions, archery competitions.

Or maybe you prefer the normal life of a mediaeval person? You can see how they made cheese and bread, how they lived, what they dressed like, even listen to authentic music played on copies of the exact instruments they used!

A unique and fun day out which you and your partner will really enjoy!

59 Take Up Geocaching

Geocaching is an up and coming past time for those who like a walk with a twist…

Hidden around in the great outdoors all over the world there are little waterproof containers hidden from prying eyes. These containers house small trinkets and a logbook and pencil…

The idea of geocaching is that someone hides one of these containers and then logs it on a site along with the GPS location of it. People can then go out and try to find it, if they do they log their name in the book, take a trinket from it and replace that with something of theirs, then they go on the site and tell the person about their adventure to find it.

Rummaging around in a field which you know it 'must' be in early in the morning is frustratingly addictive! This is something unusual you can try when your partner thinks walking is 'boring'!

60 Workout Together

Exercising together is not very romantic - but how about a gentle workout together or yoga etc?

Buy a workout DVD, either something like yoga or a gentle aerobics routine or even Tai Chi or Qi Gong. This means you can both workout together so you both feel good for doing something healthy and get to spend time together, but you also get to do it in the comfort of your own home and don't need to get all sweaty doing it because it is just gentle exercise to ease you into it.

Sure if you want to take it to the next level you can go out jogging etc - but start small!

61 Whittle The Time Away

Is your partner the kind of person that can never sit still? If so this may not be for them… (always remember to tailor dates to your partner, everyone enjoys different things!)

If they like a bit of serenity then take your date down to a river or lake with two sharp knives, then find some good dry wood and start to carve it out and see what you can each make.

Being careful with the knives is crucial to the success of this date!!!

You may surprise yourself at how good it turns out, but even if it is useless then you can spend the time talking while whittling away the wood and just slow down and appreciate each other and nature more.

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

62 Play A Game With A Difference

We've all played board games before, and I'm partial to a game myself (although I'd prefer poker) but you can guarantee if you bring out a board game with an expectant look on your face your partner will probably sigh and call you a saddo.

So give it a twist, get a board game that hopefully doesn't have a lot of paper stuff to blow about (not Monopoly then!) - although try and do this on a nice day without much wind!

Then head off into the wilderness together and when you get to a suitable spot in the sun, maybe a big fallen log would be fun, then sit down there and play, have some food on hand, and relax together in the sun playing Mousetrap or Kerrplunk etc! They'll love the change of location!

63 Explore The Underwater World

Snorkeling allows you to see lots of cool things, but you don't need to do it in the tropics to have fun doing this.

As long as you have some relatively clear water then you are good to go, how about that river near you - any clear spots in that you want to explore?

How about lake you always swim in? That any good for snorkeling? Give it a try and see what you can find!

If all else fails then hop in the car and go to the beach for the day and then go snorkeling there (not as fun though in my opinion!).

64 Some Log Cabin Fun

This may seem like a strange one, as not everyone has access to a log cabin… but spending a night together (or a weekend is even better) in a log cabin when it is cold outside and you are warm and snuggled up together in front of the fire.

Search online, maybe there is one near a lake near you? Or maybe you could get something similar like a little cottage near a river etc?

Your partners face will light up when you spring this romantic date on them and you will both have a great time!

65 Take Your Bike Ride Further

We spoke earlier about going out in your local area for a bike ride, so you should now have some experience!

Now take it to the next level by taking a road trip with the bikes to somewhere exciting you can bike round!

I remember going to the Malvern Hills here in the UK where we walked to the top of the hills, which at some points are nearly 1,400ft above sea level! And then proceeded to speed down the other side!

You can see some fantastic sites together like this and inject some excitement into the experience which you don't get from just walking along together.

66 Speak To The ~~Feds~~ Police

We all get nervous around coppers, it is only natural!

Yet they have a line of work which not only exposes them to a constant barrage of interesting and disturbing stories, but also gives them an intimate knowledge of your area and the people in it.

Take your partner and try and find a copper who is out on the beat and walk with them to find out about their experiences, find out what is good and bad about the job, what their worst arrest was, what the best area of town is etc.

You may be amazed by some of the stuff you get told!

67 Remove All Your Clothes...

Want a guaranteed way to see your partner naked for the night?

Have a nude evening!

Let's face it, most people only see their partner naked in the bedroom usually or the bath. Yet it is our natural state and it can be quite 'liberating' to shake free of the shackles of our clothes (without the nervousness and self-consciousness of being on a nudist beach like I mentioned earlier!).

Crank the heating up to the max, eat your dinner first and then after stripping off get any naughtiness done and dusted so you can concentrate on relaxing and watching a film together etc while free and naked!

68 Getting Ready For A Date

This is not so much a date idea, as a date tip...

When you go out there is a certain amount of sexual tension between you and your partner, that can really make a date special as you are both on edge wanting to flirt and trying to get to the next stage of the night.

Yet after the event you are both relaxed and not thinking about it as much... so take some time out to seduce your partner before your date...

That means the whole dynamic of your night will change as you don't have that tension and can just laugh and joke and be yourself, never having to do anything you don't want to just to try and gain some brownie points ready for later!

69 Limbo?

How about staging your own limbo contest?

Put on some funky music, maybe a bit of Caribbean music so you can get into the spirit of things, maybe even dress up in some weird and wonderful costumes as well!

Then turn the lights down low and get some candles going and get the contest going!

After you are both exhausted and have collapsed in a fit of giggles on the floor then put on a light-hearted film to relax with like 'Cool Runnings'!

70 Lemonade, lemonade?

You see it mentioned on films all the time, but did you ever actually make a lemonade stand when you were a kid and stand out in your front yard selling it?

Well now is your chance! Have some fun making lemonade and cakes with your partner and then spend the day getting to know others in your local area with your very own lemonade and cake stand!

You will have a great time chatting with others all day and in the end you can either keep the money or donate it all to charity to really feel good!

71 Any Good At Drawing?

Any good at drawing? No? Even better!

Grab yourself some paper and some pens and pencils, sit down in your living room with a bottle of wine and some music playing softly in the background and draw each other!

You could do serious portraits and see how they come out, or maybe pose for each other's drawing… do caricatures of each other or put them in amusing situations - have fun with it!

But also remember not to land yourself in the doghouse, if you know your partner is particularly sensitive about a part of their body, like they think they have a big nose, then you had better make sure you give them a small nose in the drawing or you are in trouble!

72 Sing Your Heart Out

Do you like to get up onto the stage and wail your heart out and murder some classic songs? Then have a karaoke night!

Buy or hire one of those karaoke machines and you'll get a microphone and speakers to blast out your tunes on, and more importantly the ability to follow along to the words on your TV for those tricky songs you haven't heard before but really want to have a shot at!

This is a great as a couple or even better as a double or triple date! Get some drink down you and have a karaoke party!

73 Act Like You Can Act

Fancy yourself as an actor? Maybe that would be your worst nightmare?

Either way you can still have fun acting with your partner one night, it is not frightening when it is just your partner after all!

Pick your favorite play to re-enact for the night, or actually buy a set of scripts for a popular play online. Maybe even freestyle for a bit to add to a well known play or story, or just to act out a random story together!

If you decide to freestyle you can have some really good laughs, you will start off serious but I can guarantee you will be in fits of giggles soon after as you both make up random things to say and funny situations that your partner then has to try and act their way out of.

Go on, let down your guard and act silly together for a night!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

74 Talking With A Twist

Did you know that when you block out one sense that others are enhanced?

Why do you think people like to blindfold their partner and feed them things? (that's another date idea for you...).

Well take this to the extreme, most people never really listen to their partner, we have such short attention spans today what with the TV and mobiles and everything that distracts us, we are lucky to get 50% of their attention!

So spend an hour or two on the sofa talking to each other... in pitch black...turn the lights off, try and block out as much light as possible, then have a heart to heart about anything, you will have the most fantastic conversation and really bond while doing this, not to mention you get to flirt with each other in the dark without the other seeing your evil grin while you do it!

75 Swim With Gentle Giants

There are a few creatures on this Earth that really catch in our imagination, Humpback whales, the gentle giants of the ocean are one of them.

Imagine a mammal who can grow up to 15 meters long and weigh up to 40 metric tons, yet is a gentle and docile creature, awe inspiring in its power and beauty yet playful and curious.

You can swim with humpback whales all over the world but don't expect it to be cheap unless you actually live where they have whales (the rest of us need to pay to get there first!). You get to watch them from the boat and study their behavior, see them playing and exploring their world. Then you get to jump into the water and see them on their terms in the sea.

An unforgettable experience!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

76 Go Crazy In The Moonlight

You may have noticed a few crazy things to do in these guides, those are the best!

Although on paper they seem exotic and strange, and your friends may consider them so as well, really everyone will be jealous that you get to do things like this together and these are the things that you will look back on as you get older and really remember and enjoy reminiscing about!

So what is this crazy scheme? Well, wait until it is a full moon, cook a romantic dinner for your partner, then take them outside and have some soft music playing for you both, then dance slowly together under the pale glow of the moonlight and savour everything about your partner.

77 Appreciate The Stars More

We've all appreciated the stars at one point or another, they are beautiful beyond compare.

But how much do you know about them?

Take your partner star gazing, but first take the time to get a book out from the library about the constellations and about space.

Then you will both be able to find the constellations, the north star, enjoy looking for the planets and basically get so much more out of the experience!

You can then reel off some facts about stars and space to really make you appreciate the sheer size of this wonderful universe we live in…

78 Learn More About The Wildlife Around You

This is another date like the star gazing one where you get a chance to do something you have probably done before, but learn more about the subject and really appreciate the activity for the first time.

Go to the library and get some books out on local wildlife and plant life, then go for a long walk with your partner around your local area and appreciate all the nature around you.

Any time you don't recognise something then whip out the books and try to identify it and learn about it - you will be experts by the end of the walk!

79 The 'Ants In Your Pants' Date

Going to new places is exciting, experiencing new places and menus is exciting…

So why be boring and stick to one place for a meal?

After all, that posh restaurant may be perfect for the main course, but the coffeeshop you know about with a choice of 20 different types of cake is the perfect place for dessert…

Go out for a dinner together, get the starters in one place, then move on and get the main in another, then finish off with dessert in a final place, maybe even then move on again and round the evening off with some drinks in another place.

You get to keep your date on his or her toes all night and you'll appreciate the change of scenery each time as you explore each place in a way you usually wouldn't (we usually just sit down, scan through and order, but with just one but of the menu to choose from you will savor your choices more!)

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

80 Playing With Rocks

Rock hounding - the hobby or mineral/rock collecting is a gentle hobby you can both enjoy!

You need a little rock hammer, but what you do is head out to places known for interesting rocks/minerals, find stones likely to contain them and then split them open to see inside the rock for you find!

You know those geodes of amethyst you buy for a nice sum of money in shops? You can find all things like that as you explore (obviously only in certain areas and certain types of rock) so you never know what you are going to find!

81 Get Yourselves A Joint Penpal

Ever had a Penpal as a kid?

Well now getting a penpal is 10x easier as you have the internet! Although I admit I would still prefer a penpal who writes a letter, but the choice is yours.

Go to www.penpalworld.com, www.interpals.net or www.penpal.net and you can browse through people from all over the world. Choose a country you would love to get to know someone from (maybe a country you want to visit sometime in the future so you could visit your penpal?) and then write an email or letter together to introduce yourself!

You may want to contact more than one person to make sure you get a response! Now each time you get a response you can get together with your partner, sit down over a drink and read and reply to it!

82 Watch The Horses

Horse racing is a hugely popular sport which cultivates a fantastic atmosphere if you are lucky enough to be at the racetrack.

Take your partner along to a race, enjoy the hustle and bustle of the track, admire the horses as they are paraded around, try and pick a few winners by putting small bets on if you want!

Also take in the bizarre world of the bookmaker who keeps in contact with his helpers in the crowd with a selection of elaborate arm and hand movements so that each bookie can see what horses the other bookies are taking bets on well or ones they have changed the odds on.

83 Shower Your Pets With Affection

If you have pets then when is the last time you really set aside some time to spoil them with attention and affection?

Pets like cats and dogs are fantastic companions, they light up our day with their innocent and hilarious antics! They offer love when our partners are not there, and they drive us crazy when they break something or make a mess!

So take some time out to really spend with your pet for the night. Grab your partner and go out shopping for them, get them anything they need, and some things they don't! Maybe even make or buy some toys or more comfy bed for them.

Then get home and really pamper your pet, if you have a dog then take it out for a walk, if you have a cat then play with it until it gets tired and then falls asleep in between both of you on the sofa.

84 Hunt Some Ghosties

Scared of ghosts?

Yeh me too! But you can actually go ghost hunting in actual haunted places like castles, mansions, ancient pubs or even caves!

These aren't you old, 'get somebody to run around in a bed sheet and shut doors loudly' kind of hunts either, anything artificial would tarnish their reputation, so it is just you and your partner and a small group staying for the night in a haunted building.

A medium is present to take you round and see if they can sense any spirits, as well as a guide who know the history of the building and can give you a proper tour so you know any tragedies that befell the previous occupants!

A terrifying yet exhilarating experience!

85 Build A Treehouse?

If you have a tree in your backyard then maybe you could build a treehouse with your loved one?

Get some plans off the internet (like from http://www.ronhazelton.com/howto/treehouse_construction.htm)

Get some wood and tools - and start to build it!

If neither of you are very good with woodwork or tools then maybe you should just create a treehouse by putting some pillows up in the big branches for you to sit on and then spend an afternoon sat up in the tree talking while listening to the birds and enjoying the view!

86 Rob A Hotel

Having a change of scenery is important sometimes, it clears your heads, gives you a chance to free yourself from the burdens that are associated with your house and therefore work and responsibilities.

Whisk your partner away for a night (start on a Saturday and you get from 2pm onwards usually so you can make the most of the change of scenery).

Shamelessly abuse the hotel facilities and plunder the complimentary food and cosmetics, let yourselves go and just enjoy the night of freedom and relax.

Then maybe come home with some new towels for your bathroom!

87 Go Camping Without The Fuss

Even if you can get over the fact there are bugs all over you and you are cold and hungry, then if you go out camping normally then you are still miles from anywhere and totally vulnerable.

How about camping in your backyard? Did you ever do that as a kid?

You get the genuine 'camping' experience (not like the camping indoors date mentioned before which is still has central heating and mod cons!) of being cold and having to survive without your espresso maker etc…

Yet you can nip into the house as necessary, you are safe in your backyard and you don't have to drive for hours to get back home the next day - perfect!

Grab your partner and go and have some campfire fun in your backyard today!

88 Tour A Candy Factory?

Exploring things that we never normally get to see is a great way to have fun.

Take factories for instance... I'm serious! Like chocolate factories, we know the end product intimately, but what actually goes into its manufacture?

If you visit http://www.factorytoursusa.com you can find a whole host of interesting places to go and visit which are really different and interesting. If you live in Georgia how about visiting 'Hansel and Gretel's Candy Kitchen'? to see how they make candy. Or 'Susans Elements of Arts' which allows you to see Susan and her husband working on stained glass work or carving wooden bowls.

Try it and see what weird and wonderful things you can enjoy!

89 Have Fun In The Garden

Gardens can be an oasis of life of a junkyard, depending on the owner.

Luckily there are always people who take great pride in their gardens, or gardens of large estates etc which are maintained by talented gardeners.

Visit http://www.gardenvisit.com and you can find lists of gardens near you that you can go and visit. Pick a few near each other, grab your partner and head out on a nice sunny day.

Spend a relaxing morning walking through the gardens taking in the sights, seeing the exotic plants and the fantastic sculptures and water features, then head to a pub for lunch and then onto more gardens before heading home for the night.

Innocent fun which also allows you to marvel at some of the beauty hidden away right under your nose!

90 Make A Keepsake Of Your Partner

Ever miss your partner when they are away?

Of course you do! How would you like a way to really cherish them while they are away...

You can buy a kit from art shops which gives you everything you need to make a plaster of paris mask from your partners face! Then you can dry and paint it and always have a reminder when you are missing your loved one.

Then have them do it to you so you both can caress the lines of each other faces even thousands of miles apart...

91 Watching The World Go By

This is one of those simple dates again, one that emphasizes thoughtful contemplation and gentle conversation and play.

It is better to do this on a nice day, preferably a Saturday as you need to start it off before it gets dark.

So wake your partner up with breakfast in bed, relax and watch some TV together.

Then head out to somewhere you can sit outside and have a coffee etc, preferably with a nice view. Then proceed to just watch the world go by, try to guess peoples ages, their cars etc just by looking at them, let people remind you of things, philosophize about life and the Earth.

Just enjoy taking some time out to 'slow down' from the fast pace of modern life and enjoy the fresh air and good company.

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

92 Stand Up For A Cause

What do you believe in?

Are you against animal testing? Do you dislike conflict or think that the government should be more open about their secret projects?

Either way there is bound to be a protest, march or meeting near you soon which you can participate in. Make sure you partner agrees with your views though or it will be a terrible date for them.

Take pride in sticking up for something you believe in!

93 Gossip About Work

How much do you know about your partners work?

You and your partner will spend more time at work than you will ever spend together so it is important to show an interest in their job and their career or you may find that you are cut out of that part of their life and start to resent their 'other life' at work.

Sit down together for the night, chat about how their work is going, what new things they are doing, what they enjoy, what they are working towards etc and share all your news too.

Then get onto the juicy stuff - gossip! Who is sleeping with how at work, who did something embarrassing at the photocopier etc, it will join a part of your lives that is usually kept separate from your partner and will give you a happier and stronger relationship as a result!

Plus they will be really impressed you want to learn about what they do!

94 Become A Secret Admirer To Someone

Being mischievous is always better when there are two of you...

Take the evening out to make some romantic cards to send to a friend each, you write the card to one of their friends and they write it to one of yours so the handwriting looks correct for the gender.

Have fun making up soppy poems or stories to put in them and deliver them by hand that night and then spend the next day trying not to laugh as your friend tells you about some secret admirer they have and how jealous you must be about not getting one...

95 The Bells...

We have all no doubt heard the bells of a church ringing out throughout the day and then for extended bouts in the evening.

At a set time during the week bell-ringers get together to practice their art and enjoy their hobby. How many people do you know who have had a go at bell-ringing? None I bet!

So this is an unusual and exciting date, where you get to see into an art that stretches back hundreds and hundreds of years and few people have ever experienced!

You need to sweet talk your local priest, but it shouldn't be too hard if you tell them that you are really interested in what it involves and would be really grateful if you could just come along for a night.

I am sure all the bell ringers would enjoy the fresh faces as well.

96 Try The Ultimate Horse Riding Experience

Ok, so if you took my advice earlier you now have at least some experience of riding a horse...

Now it is time to take it to the next level - ride it bareback!

This is known as the ultimate horse riding experience, it is not for the faint hearted as it is just you and the horse with nothing tangible to hold onto if things get hairy! (pun intended!)

It is the perfect union of man and horse, the most natural but hardest way to ride a horse.

You probably need more lessons before you can do this (a good excuse to go on more horse riding dates) and then find a competent bareback instructor and see if they think you are ready.

97 Find Your Perfect House

On a nice day (not too sunny or it will be uncomfortable in the car) then drive around your local area looking for your dream house, stop off near all the large houses and then go for walks round that neighborhood and take a peek at all the huge drives, the attached swimming pools, the beautiful cars in the driveway and imagine yourself in the same situation!

You could also look for house open days where you can go along and look around as they are selling the house and want to let prospective purchasers take a look around, just make sure you dress up if you do this so you don't stand out as looking just for fun!

98 Gatecrash A Local Talent Show

There are a lot of talented people out there who never get their break to go professional theatre/films/comedy etc.

Take your partner out for the night to a local talent show where people compete for your votes to be crowned the winner.

You can see some amazing acts, jugglers, dancers, comedians, all sorts of people with all sort of levels of skill!

Have fun watching the acts and then discussing afterwards over a coffee nearby all the best (and worst) acts!

99 Make Dinner Difficult

Sometimes being silly can produce a really memorable date.

This is a date you will definitely want to do in the comfort of your own home!

Prepare a normal romantic meal to surprise your other half with. But confuse them by asking them to put on some clothes they don't really care about…

Then as you begin on your starter and they look around for the knife and fork drop the bombshell on them - you have to eat everything with just chopsticks!

This will produce laughs, frustration, a mess and more! Try and make it easy food to eat with chopsticks, no soup for a start! But also no rice and small things!

Your partner will appreciate the change of routine and it will definitely be a memorable night!

100 A-Maze-ing

Mazes are great fun!

Spending time with your partner on a lovely day trying to find your way to the center, laughing as you round and find another dead-end! Trying to cheat and climb through the bushes!

I went to one a year or two ago where not only did you have a maze to solve, but hidden round it where stones with clues on to allow you to activate the 'magic frog' display at the end which had a secret switch you had to find from the clues - it was great fun!

There are loads of great mazes for you to try all over the world, visit http://www.maze-world.com for a list of hundreds!

101 This One Is A Scream

This is a date you will remember for life!

Grab a load of one dollar bills (or get change from somewhere) and then head out onto the street for a day. Try and get somewhere with a nice amount of traffic but not too much as you will be stopping people and don't want to get trampled constantly!

Then wait for someone who looks interesting to walk by and stop them for a second. Then offer to buy one interesting story from their life for a dollar, you will be amazed at the stories you get and you will meet some really cool people.

Then you can retire to a coffee shop to discuss the best stories of the day!

102 This One Is Also A Scream!

This one could lead to some interesting results as well...

Grab some wine and sit down with your partner on the sofa for a night in together.

Then phone a random number (dial randomly or just pick randomly from the phonebook) and ask for someone like 'Liz Evans'. When they say you have the wrong number it is your job to get them talking!

Apologise and ask them why they are in the country/city, then make up a story about when you were there and just try and get a conversation going with a stranger!

Then switch and it is their turn to do it, have the phone on speakerphone for the best effect - whoever keeps someone talking the longest is the winner!

103 Be A Pain...

Hehe - this date is about being a pain and seeing the result.

Only do this if your date is comfortable with it though! And if they are going to back you up!

What you do is go to a local meeting (like a council meeting etc) and agree to the opposite of what everyone else does and then try and defend your position...

This will lead to some good 'debates' and you should have a great time if you like a good 'debate' - trying to justify your position forces you and your partner to be creative and you will come out with some great lines!

104 Have A Dogfight (In A Plane)

Unique is too gentle a word for this date, cheap is also not the right word...

For just over a thousand dollars per person you can actually take to the skies for a dogfight!

You pilot a SIAI Marchetti SF260 attack fighter and get 3 hours in the air (6 dogfights) learning how to fly it, then you and the instructor take it through its paces doing rolls and loops etc and having a real dogfight trying to lock onto each other for that 'kill shot'!

Head over to aircombatusa.com for a thrilling date!

105 Get All The Good Points Of Camping Without The Bad Ones

I've spoken now about camping indoors, camping in your backyard... but maybe you don't even want that, maybe you hate tents?

Well get all the good points of camping without the bad ones by taking your date out into the country with some wood, some matches and a portable stereo (and some marshmallows).

Then spend the night listening to romantic music in front of the fire, dancing and toasting marshmallows, singing and enjoying yourselves. Then afterwards pack everything up, head home and snuggle up in a real bed!

106 Have Fun At The River

Rivers are relaxing places to be in summer, the sound of the water, the abundance of animal life and plant life, it is a great place to be.

So take your partner and have a nice day at the river, go swimming, catch crayfish or normal fish, maybe even race on inflatable tubes or lilos and definitely have water fight, make sure it is a nice day before you do this though!

You could even get a disposable BBQ to take down to cook your lunch in true al fresco style!

107 Make Fools Of Yourselves

Have you ever fancied acting in a play? No? No matter - but you could do if you get accepted!

This is another date to push you outside of your usual routine and is really fun if you get into the spirit of things and really enjoy yourself.

Audition together for parts in a local play, get up on that stage and either give it your best, or funniest, performance depending on how comfortable you are with it all! You will get to meet the regular actors, learn about the play and about how things run behind the scenes, you will get to watch other auditions and you can both laugh afterwards about how one of you was pulling faces at the other as they were auditioning so they couldn't stop laughing etc ☺

108 The Old Favorite - Cloud Gazing

Is this a date? Well sort of.

Wait for a sunny day with some good clouds in the sky. Then head to a nearby hill, preferably away from the crowds and with some good views.

Spend the day chasing each other and messing around, stand in awe of the view with your partner in your arms, explore the area (there is a great place to do this at near me with a windmill at the top of the hill to explore) then lie together on your backs and try to make shapes out of the clouds, an old idea but it still provokes a lot of fun and laughter.

109 How About Something Wacky?

This is a dangerous one, even more dangerous than skydiving...

You'll need some books from the library first and some free space outside and preferably some padding for yourself and the ground...

Then hire a unicycle for the day and you and your partner try and master it! Think of the look on your friends faces when you come along the road on a unicycle! Lol

It is a wacky, silly date that will probably result in an injury but it is creative and fun!

110 Learn To Read Tarot Cards

Whether you believe in ghosts, psychics, UFOs etc or not, then there is a lot of fun to be had learning about these topics and you may change your mind after you look into them!

One thing you can learn which is more 'hands-on' is the art of Tarot Reading. You can buy Tarot cards cheaply from most bookstores, then get a book from the library on how to read them and settle down for the night.

To master the cards takes years, but you can be doing your first reading in just minutes with the aid of the book to 'translate' for you! Take it in turns to read for each other and learn more about each card in turn.

You may find you really enjoy it and want to continue to master them together!

111 Head To The Beach

I find that beaches are most relaxing when there are less people there in the morning or at night.

Take your partner to the beach for the day, go early and spend your time beachcombing for nice shells and stones or just looking at the sea life around while the tide is out (explore some rock pools!).

Then as the people start to fill the beach head off for a nice breakfast nearby and a chat. Then head back to the beach to enjoy the rest of the day with all the crowds!

112 Slow Down For Awhile & Get In A Canoe

A canoe is a fantastic mode of transport that is rumoured to have been around for thousands of years.

When in a canoe you can just slow down and enjoy the scenery around you as you silently drift along on the river of life.

Either take your partner and a tent and supplies out in a canoe and Google some routes which you can follow (you may have to travel for good ones) and make a weekend of it.

Or just hire a canoe from somewhere and they will know the best spots to go to, take a picnic and then get out there and enjoy the peace and quiet...

113 Speed Up For Awhile & Attack The Rapids

This is quite the opposite end of the spectrum to canoeing!

You can book yourself in for a day of white water rafting for just $60 each! That is the class 3 hardcore kind of rafting too, you pay less for the tamer stuff.

You get 5 hours of travelling along 12 miles of intense rapids - lots of fun and laughter (and scary moments) which will give you lots to remember and talk about!

You get lifejackets but it is advisable that you know how to swim before you try this!

Visit http://www.whitewaterrafting.com for more details.

114 Take To The Skies

Ah helicopters...

Helicopters have an affluent air to them, they seem to be a lot 'posher' than planes for some reason, maybe it is because you can't travel vast distances in them like planes so they are not as common that makes them seem that way?

Either way, your partner will be impressed if you organise a trip out in one for the night!

Start the night off with a romantic meal, then head quickly over to where the helicopter is waiting and watch their eyes light up! You are looking at $200 each for a 30 minute ride, but there is nothing more magical than seeing a city at night by helicopter!

115 Reminisce Over Ice Cream

This date idea is one that will give you even more date ideas because of it! So it is a double whammy!

Look after your partner when they come home from work, help them to relax, cook dinner for them etc (usual sort of stuff).

Then retire to the living room and sit down over a bowl of ice cream together and try to remember as many dates as you can that you have been on together, this is great as you remind each other of the ones they forgot, you go over the good and bad experiences, you will both be laughing (and cringing) and before you know it then it will be time to head up to bed!

Then from going over all the old dates you will know what worked and what didn't and you head will be buzzing with ideas for future dates!

116 Learn Some Foreign Lingo

I have always thought it would be fun to lean a foreign language with a partner because it would enable you to talk about other people on trains etc and more than likely you would be the only ones to understand!

So if you are going away this year (or if you just want to learn a language as you love the country in question or fancy a challenge) then take your partner to a class in a foreign language. You both get to expand your minds, you get to have fun practicing what you learnt on each other at home and you get a bit of time together doing something productive which will come in extremely handy the next time you go on holiday to that country!

117 Become A Duet

Have you ever seen those small booths in shopping malls that allow you to record your own song?

No? Ok well you could just book some cheap studio time, just use Google to find somewhere near you, you can probably get it down for around $50 - 100.

Pick a song before you go that you both really like and really know the words to - if you don't know the words I suggest you spend a week learning them beforehand!

Then head over and record your song together and then take it home and listen to it if you can stomach it!

It will be a great experience and something for you both to cherish!

118 Have Your Scribbles Analysed

Our handwriting can tell people so much about us, are you organised? Are you a shy person? Are you an angry person?

It is amazing to think we communicate all that in out handwriting unconsciously!

For this date you can either take your partner out to someone near you who analyses handwriting (a Graphologist) and have them analyse both of your handwriting styles and tell you all about yourself!

Or the cheaper option which involves a lot more teamwork and laughter is to go to the library and get some books on Graphology and then sit down for the rest of the day and learn about what your handwriting is telling you together!

119 Bask In The Beauty Of The Coming Day

Is this a date? Well sort of, you can turn it into a date by adding to it, but if you haven't done this before then the impact it will have is well worth the effort!

Plan ahead for this date and preferably find a hill which has a clear view to the East...

Then wake your date up early (preferably on a weekend!) and drag them out, not telling them what you are going to do... and take them to that hill and watch the sunrise together (you can find out when the sun is going to rise and set online when you search for the weather in your area).

Then after they have finished telling you how fantastic and romantic you are then turn it into a proper date by taking your partner for a nice breakfast to wake them up and then spend the day doing one of these other date ideas!

120 Scare Each Other Silly

We all like to get scared sometimes, whether that be ghost hunting, watching scary movies, or just listening to scary stories!

Organise a quiet night in, either just you two or a double date. Hire out some scary ghost movies and hire some ghost story books out from the library.

The spend the night in total darkness, warm up with a scary film to get people's imaginations running wild... then start to read scary stories to each other by candlelight, be as expressive as you can and scaring people suddenly is obligatory!

Innocent fun for everyone!

121 Ok This Is A Bit Random (please email me if you do it!)

Alright, I sometimes come up with some wacky ideas, but hey - for some people this will be a great idea!

The basic idea is to get onto a golf course at night (yes trespassing, I do not in any way condone trespassing, obviously I was thinking of you asking the owners, but if you don't do that then that is your choice!)

Get some night vision goggles (or just know the course really really well!) and play night-time golf...

You can get golf balls that glow from here: http://glowproducts.com/noveltyglowproducts/nightgolfball/ so there is no excuse for losing your ball!

If you do anything else on the golf course to commemorate the event... then make sure you rake the sand back in the bunker afterwards with your hands!

122 Put It All Down For Later

We all have photos of times in our relationship - we may also have little trinkets that we keep like cinema tickets etc and I am sure they are stuffed somewhere 'safe' for you to look at once in a blue moon (about every 3 years a blue moon occurs so maybe a bit longer than that!)

Take the time out with your partner to sit down with a bottle of wine together, drag out everything like that, and make scrapbook of your relationship! Put photos in there, tickets, notes etc, you can use a big photo album to it if you want to so you can get everything back out easily.

Put little handwritten notes in with everything to annotate what they are and what you remember about that item, you can have hours of fun with this, remember some great times together and get a great scrapbook to keep up to date which you can always look back on together as your relationship grows.

123 Play Hookey

The excitement of doing something 'naughty' always heightens the experience you then have...

Now all people are different, but for 80% of the population then playing 'hookey' from work is something that gets the heart pumping, having to phone in falsely and make up an excuse etc - easy for some people but excruciatingly hard for me and the rest!

So take the time to both play hookey for the day and then go out and enjoy being naughty together, enjoy the freedom of being free from work for the day and go and do some great stuff you normally wouldn't have the time to do, go to places that are always packed on a weekend and enjoy the freedom!

124 A Weekend Without Time

In the modern world we are so constrained by time! We run our lives by calendars, Outlook, watches, alarm clocks, it can be hectic at times!

Take some time out with your partner, the best way to do this is to book yourselves into a hotel or B&B for the weekend, but you can do it at home if you are disciplined (yeh book a hotel or B&B!)

Then spend the whole weekend without watches or clocks, do everything together and do what you want when you want, eat what you want when you want, and just relish in the freedom of it.

You will be amazed at how relaxing it is not to have to keep any kind of schedule and just do everything you want t when you want to.

125 Get To Know Your Parents

How much do you really know about your parents? Would you be sad if they passed on without you getting to really know them?

Take the time out to spend the day/evening with one set of parents (alternate so it is fair) really talking to them about how they met, their childhood etc, you will learn lots and have memories to treasure.

You will form a real bond with them and you will get to know your partners parents as well which you be so glad of later in life.

126 Join In Some Celebrations

Do you like a good celebration? Of course you do!

Well did you know there are all sorts of celebrations going on throughout the year that you don't join in with?

To have some fun then take the time out to join in the festivities for a holiday you normally don't celebrate like the Chinese New Year. You will meet some great people, have lots of fun and might even find something you want to do every year!

127 Play With The Birds

We've all been to a zoo before, but what about one specifically tailored to birds?

You'll have to use Google to find one near you but there are loads of 'bird parks' all over the world where you can go and see all sorts of exotic birds flying around, you can feed them and they often have open enclosures (you go through two sets of double-doors to keep the bird in but it is open inside) where you can stand in the viewing gallery at the edge of their habitat and feed the birds naturally, they will fly across and sit on your shoulder and take the food off you or try and sneak up on you and take the food!

The last one I went to also had a completely open area where there were a number of parrots and cockatoos that would step onto your arm so you could feed them, or just sit on their branches and you could literally hand feed them monkey nuts - great fun!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

128 Watch Some Racing

If you like cars then watching racing is an exciting day out. The thrill of the noise and smell of race cars, the exhilaration of seeing them fighting for their places and in some instances hitting into each other!

If you and your partner like cars, or if they do and you can tolerate it for the day, then spend day at a race track (or rally course) watching a live race and eating hot dogs!

There are thousands of race tracks available and all sorts of racing you can watch, there is rally, single-seater racing (F1 etc), ice racing, touring cars, stock cars, drag racing, sports cars, off road, hill climbing and even go-kart racing which you can find in varying degrees around the country.

129 Get Muddy And Go Exploring

Quad bikes are great fun to ride on. They are rugged and fast and easy to drive, yet are able to get into and out of some pretty tough spots! Not to mention they are great when it has been raining and the ground is really muddy!

Take your partner out for the day and either rent a pair of quad bikes (of you have had some experience already), or go on a quick course where they take you out and show what the bikes can do and then you go on a trip out with them riding round forests and courses that they have made for you and having a great time.

Make sure you take some old clothes for the experience as it can get messy!

130 Have A Gorefest

Gory films, ones that can really make you cringe like that bit in Wolf Creek where he sticks the knife into... well I won't ruin it in case you haven't seen it! These kind of films hold a sick kind of fascination for us just like ghost films.

I mean why would any sane person really want to watch others being cut up? Is it because it makes us feel better that is it not happening to us? Or just because it could happen to us so it is more scary?

Either way, have a night of being grossed out, hire out the goriest films you can and snuggle up together on the sofa with some popcorn and prepare to be disgusted!

Hire 'Wolf Creek' for sure if you haven't seen it already!

131 Learn To Play Something Cool!

Can you play a musical instrument?

If you can I bet it is something mainstream like the guitar or the piano... why not learn something cool with your partner like the didgeridoo or the bongos!

Think of how cool it will look when you tell people you can play the didgeridoo!

Plus you get to share something with your partner that not many other people have, which adds to the excitement and enjoyment of the experience!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

132 Find Out Who You Truly Are...

Do you really know your personality type? Do you know that the way you avoid that particular activity/saying that particular thing to people marks you out as a stereotypical personality type?

This is another learning date where you get to learn a cool topic together and find out more about yourselves in the process!

You need to nip to the library (I bet you are on first name terms with the librarian by now!) and get out books on personality types and how to identify them.

Then settle down for the afternoon with some wine and quiz each other using the questions they give you to find out what kind of personality you have, there is bound to be plenty of denials and some arguments, but you can bet that deep down you both learn a lot about yourself and your partner in the process!

133 What Do You Really Want From Life?

This is a big one, I passionately believe in people achieving their dreams, too often we don't even have any dreams because society seeks to crush them, you need to find out what your dreams are and work towards them, working towards them with your partner just makes them twice as sweet.

Sit down together with some quiet music on and some pads of paper. Make lists of everything you have ever wanted to do, places to go, to own, to see etc, don't cut it down or be 'realistic', just get as much down as possible!

Then swap lists and talk about each of them, you will have a great time learning about your partners dreams. Then try and pick some each year to make come true until you have done them all, keep the list on show in your home at all times so you both never lose sight of your dreams.

134 Book a private dining room

Ok, this is more for when you want to make a big impression, but you can use it at anytime to really wow your partner and have them fall into your arms!

I did this a few years ago and my partner was speechless, all you need to do is phone up a restaurant that has either a private dining room or a conference room, ask them if they will set it up for two people with a lot of candles and a table etc for you (they love the idea and think you are so romantic).

Picking a good restaurant is the key, it needs to be high quality so that they appreciate what you are trying to do, but not too expensive! Go visit the place if you haven't been before, and maybe buy some candles on the way and give them to the restaurant to use so they don't skimp on them.

The secret to this is to book it mid-week! Anything else would cost you a fortune but I found they are more than happy to do this for you midweek for nothing! (literally for me, I gave a big tip, but I didn't have to if I didn't want to!)

When they walk into that dining room lit by candlelight and realise you have the whole room to yourself with a romantic table in the middle of a sea of candles... it will be a night to remember forever!

135 Get the Creative Juices Flowing

Sometimes we need a bit of a push to be creative, but then we can come up with some of our best ideas! How about getting 26 strips of paper and writing a different letter from the alphabet onto each and putting them into a jar.

Then once a week or month, you take it in turns to pull out a letter, and the person who pulls it out has a few days to plan a date where everything begins with that letter! What you do, eat, drink, see, they all have to start with that letter.

This will really produce some surprises and force you to do and find things you don't normally expect, you will love it after you have been on your first one! Don't skimp on this, really put effort into finding things and your partner will be really excited waiting for the night as she/he knows it will be fun and different.

136 "Pick Your Own" Farms

A date that your partner will really remember is taking them to a 'Pick Your Own' farm. They're scattered throughout the country, and it's basically where you pay a flat fee for picking a certain amount of some type of fruit. Strawberries are a favorite, but any sort of food is a fun way to be outside in the spring and really get to spend time together.

If you're looking for a long date, you could them back to your house and have everything set up for dipping them in chocolate and eating them! It's not hard, and they're delicious!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

137 Make Candles Together

Go to any craft store and pick up a candle making kit - or just grab colorful wax, and some molds. Don't forget the wick! It's easy to buy, and incredibly cheap. Then take it home, and you two can make candles of all shapes and sizes! Re-live childhood activities, and don't be afraid to make a mess.

Remember to buy various colors, and if you're feeling adventurous, grab jewels, sparkles, pins, and more to add to the finished product. It may seem weird, but you can have a lot of fun with it. Remember, in the end, the fun matters!

Head over to here for more info on how to make candles.

138 Go Fly a Kite

This is for the skilled, or the especially willing to try something new - if you know of an open field, or empty beach, you can grab a kite and make it an afternoon. Try flying it from different directions and in different patterns, and see how well you can both do. Even make it a competition, and grab something special for the winner!

Make sure you get a small kite as some of the bigger kites will really pull you in the wind and being pulled into the air and floating off over fields it not my idea of a great date... (would be fun though!)

139 Take a Blanket Outside

If you set this up right, it can be extremely romantic, insanely thoughtful, and you'll leave them swooning over you for months to come. In your backyard, lay out a thick blanket, and put candles around the area to light it up. Bring out another to lay over you both, and spend the evening staring at the stars and talking.

Girls love this type of stuff (and guys but they won't admit it) - if you want, bring a bottle of wine and two glasses out with you. Sip the night away, and just enjoy each other's company. Even if you're an older couple, or living together, it's a sweet and fun night alone.

...just make sure it is not the dead of winter when you do it!

140 Go to a Toy Store

Getting together in a rush? Or are you short on cash, but need a fun date? Going to a toy store is that date!

It seems silly, but they'll see that you have an inner-child that loves to come out, and you know how to have fun. Don’t go to a lame little toy store at a mall, though – go to a big chain store, like Toys R Us. You can wander and talk to each other, and have fun with the toys. Hey, you might even find out something about your partner that you never knew before!

If you are too embarrassed you can always pretend you are shopping for a kid when someone looks at you strange as you pedal around on a tricycle wearing a Darth Vader mask and trying to joust with a light sabre...

141 Dog Shows

Check the local paper, or online, and see if there are any dog shows in the area. If you can't find any, chances are you find a cat show, or even just a convention. Hang out for a few hours with your partner, and spend time petting and loving the show pooches - they deserve love, too!

Try to pick out your favorite one, and make them do the same, no matter how hard it may be to choose. You can also play games where you both try to find the most beautiful, and ugly, dog in the show room. Remember that this date only works if they like dogs - if they doesn't, it will be quite boring!

142 Eating With a Difference

Let's face it, we are creatures of habit, we go to a restaurant which offers fried crickets... well maybe something even like squid then which is more mainstream, and then we order the lasagne...

Well this date is about trying new things, choose two restaurants that you know serve more unusual food, or one that has a number of strange things, then make a commitment to only try the weird things on the menu!

Sample each others, decide which is the best (or worst) and then you get a night to tell all your friends and kids about every time they moan about eating something like crayfish and you were there gobbling down cow lung!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

143 Zorbing

Go Zorbing! It's something completely unique, and they'll think you're incredibly cool for knowing what it is it. If you're like most of us and don't know what it is... well, read on. You know. So you can look cool.

Zorbing, basically put, is when you get into a large plastic ball, most of the time made of heavy, durable plastic that's been inflated to give it life, and roll - yes, roll - down a hill. Sometimes, on hot days, people will add a bit of water inside the Zorb (The big ball) so you're stuck slipping and sliding.

If live near water, you might be able to find a place that lets you zorb on water - you end up on the water, and walking around in the ball to move it places. It's fun; they'll be impressed - and most importantly, you both will enjoy doing it.

144 Make Your Own Ice Cream

This is such a fun date! Search online and try to find the easiest, most comprehensive guide to making ice cream you can. Invite your date over to your kitchen, and have everything set up to make your very own ice cream!

Don't forget to stock up before you start. Always have on hand chocolate and caramel sauce, along with nuts, chocolate chips, ice cream cones… anything you can think of that would go great on top of ice cream!

Make sure to have extra ingredients lying around, and be fun about it… you don't have to be uptight, or worried during your little date. After ice cream, you can go for a walk or just hang out with a fun movie on the couch.

145 Visit a Pet Store and Play with the Animals

For a spontaneous date when nothing's planned, hop into the car and go to the biggest pet store you can find. Play with the puppies, snakes, rabbits, and even the mice. We all dig fluffy, sweet animals (or you can look at the tarantula if you must!) and you'll look sweet bringing them to such a nice place.

If your date isn't an animal person, this date can become a big bust fast, so make sure you know if they love the fuzzy and sweet before you both head out. It'll save you a lot of embarrassment.

146 Volunteer!

This date is thoughtful, sweet, and really shows them that you're a caring type of person - without being overly demanding. Take them to volunteer, and show them that you care about the community and humanity in general. You'll gain major points, and you'll feel good, too.

You can do a few different things - volunteering at the local homeless shelter is the easiest, but if you're in it for the long haul, you can consider doing volunteer work for a fundraiser, or at a local hospital. Even volunteering at the local animal shelter is something fun that you can both do!

147 Lake Side Evening

Pack an easy picnic, grab the car, and go off to the nearest lake or beach. Watch the sun set as it reflects off of the water as you munch and talk about anything you can think of. It's incredibly romantic, which your partner will appreciate, and even if it sounds a little corny, you'll get major points for being so sweet.

Remember to pack everything you need for a good picnic dinner, and if you're feeling particularly adventurous, search for some easy to make, unique picnic recipes online. It's always more special if you make your own food and it is nice to enjoy different food in different surroundings.

148 Baking Fun

Go online and search for a simple cookie recipe - go shopping with your partner beforehand and grab everything you need, then bring it home and make them up. Don't forget to have a hefty supply of cookie cutters if you love shapes, or just a steady hand if you want to make something unique.

Have fun with it - laugh at their attempt when they burn them to a cinder! Buy icing for the finished product, and chocolate chips to make faces and fun shapes. Don't be afraid to do something quirky and fun. We tend to love partners that are different from everyone else we've dated, and this date certainly will leave an impression on them!

149 Go to the Playground

As a spur of the moment, go to a playground - a real children's playground, with the equipment and everything! Play on all of the slides and swings, and at the end, sit together and talk about anything you want to discuss - the past, the future, or just nothing at all. Spin yourselves around on the roundabout until you are both sick...!

Sometimes it is just nice to leave behind the responsibilities of being an adult and indulge in a bit of childish fun - give it a go and don't be a wuss!

150 Reminisce

Grab a bottle of wine, or a favorite drink if you don't like alcohol, and sit down on the couch together. Bring a big photo album - or albums - of your time together. If it's cold, cover up with a blanket, and stay close together. You can even turn your heat down a bit if you're looking for an excuse to be near the other.

Make sure you both bring photo albums of each other growing up, even if you have to borrow them from family, and talk about stories of when you were young, before you two started dating. You both will benefit from the bonding time spent together, and without a doubt, it will make your relationship even stronger.

151 Clay Me

Most craft stores will put in classes each month for different things - try to find a decent class for clay modelling, and see what you can make (or what you can make that's a poor excuse for something else). If you can't find a class, don't worry! Tough it out yourself.

All you need is a sheet of plastic, some clay, and a bit of water, along with a clean space, and you can try to make a masterpiece. Make sure to keep the mood light. See if you both can re-enact the scene from "Ghost", too - if you don't know the scene, watch it before you try this date!

152 For Those Who Hate Camping

Some people love camping, some hate it, personally I hate it! Cold, uncomfortable, no amenities, not very romantic is it? Alright the camp fire is quite romantic, but then you still have to go and sleep in a cold tent afterwards!

How about camping inside then? Set up a small 2 person tent in your living room, get some white fairy lights to hang from the ceiling as stars, get the fire going if you have one, else put on one of those DVDs showing a fire, and then spend the night together snuggled up talking about anything and everything.

Tents are so much more romantic when you are all warm, comfortable and cosy...

153 Cartoony Fun

Did you have a favorite comic book when you were a child? How about a favorite cartoon? See if you can find a copy of your favorites, and share them on a night in! If you can't find anything on the TV, chances are eBay will have a copy. If not, just ask around - your friends, and family, might have something.

Bring in some popcorn, curl up under a blanket, and reminisce about the old times when cartoons were still good and comic books were geeky. You two can watch anything from Thunder Cats to Scooby Doo - it's still special.

154 A Violent Date

How about a date where you both learn valuable skills at the same time as getting to be a bit competitive AND settle any arguments that are lingering between the two of you...

Learn a martial art together or just take basic self defence classes together, you get to spend time out of the house together, get some exercise, learn how to defend yourselves. You get something to talk and laugh about when you get home, and you get to throw each other around!

If you like it then you also get a regular activity to do together, perfect!

155 Summer Sledging Fun

This is one of things that I am almost reluctant to suggest, but instead I'll put in a disclaimer, if you try this then it is at your own risk, this could be dangerous and if you get hurt it is not my fault, information provided for entertainment purposes only yada yada yada.

Ok - if you can't go sledging as it is 40 degrees outside then you can buy a block of ice from the supermarket, put a towel on the top of it and go sledging down anywhere with a bit of a slope!

156 Take a Trip

Rent a row boat for a day on a quiet lake or river, and take your partner out in the water. Take it in turns to row while the other gets to relax in the sun, discuss your thoughts, and stop at a quiet area a ways out. Pack a picnic lunch, complete with drinks, and bask in the warmth while you eat.

You can even bring books or poetry, and read to each other, or just enjoy the quiet of the lake/river. Talk and get in touch with each other again as you're outside and with nature. It's a relaxing way and romantic way to spend an afternoon.

157 Meditate

Search online, and find a meditation retreat that's near you. It shouldn't be hard, as meditation is extremely popular. Take your partner to the retreat, and enjoy each other's company in the peace. Don't be afraid of meditation because it's 'new age'. It is just a way to relax and quieten the mind.

Meditation isn't just good for the body, but the soul as well - it's true! Studies have shown that even a short amount of meditation can calm nerves, ease fears, and make you feel better overall. You can't argue much with that, can you? And when you have your partner by your side... it doesn't get much better than that.

158 Dance Dance...

Classes are always a good, fun way to spend time together - and this is no different. Find a salsa, or even ballroom dancing, class in your area and go! You both will get a great workout, and spending time together dancing is amazing. Either dance style is great for couples, unlike other styles that are more awkward for one or the other.

Dancing is a very sensual thing, so be prepared for sparks to fly when you get over your nerves, you may just head straight home afterwards...!

Or... you could go for a nice dinner - either made by you, or at a restaurant of their choice. After you both have learned a few impressive dance steps, go out dancing and show off, invite friends along and impress them with the way you two can move!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

159 Fantasize…

Grab a bottle of your favorite wine, two glasses, and curl up together - outside or on the couch, or even in bed. Bring some munchies, and turn down the heat so you'll feel warm and cosy snuggled together. Talk about your greatest fantasies about your future, and what you want to do with life in general.

You can start with fun questions, like 'What would you do if you won a million dollars?', 'What would you wish for if you had three wishes - and you can't wish for more wishes!', or even 'If you were the king/queen of your own island, what laws would you put in place?'. Have fun with it, and just enjoy time together.

160 Attend a Firewalk

Have you ever heard of a firewalk? Tony Robinson popularized it many years ago. It's basically where someone makes a large fire outside, and spreads the coals from that fire around. Then, you take off your shoes, and socks, and walk from one side to the other.

It can be a lot of fun, and it's a very good exercise in your trust of your partner! Once you have done it you will probably re-evaluate everything else in your life you previously thought was impossible! It can be a life changing experience that you will be able to look back on with your partner for the rest of your life.

161 Comedy Club

Looking for a truly fun date? Something that's full of laughs, and will always be enjoyable, no matter how many times you do it? What about a date that you can invite friends on, too? I have your answer! Get tickets to your local comedy club!

You'll get to experience up and coming comedians that are usually just as funny - if not funnier - than national acts, and you'll be on the floor laughing by the time you leave. You can double or even triple date, and sometimes will get breaks on ticket prices if you buy more at one time. Experience something new, and you'll appreciate the laughs, too.

162 Shoot 'em!

Love shooting? Or maybe you just want to learn how to shoot a gun, or teach your partner? Head to a local shooting range! They're normally extremely cheap for an afternoon of shooting, and learning a new skill is something you should always value.

Clay pigeon shooting is a lot of fun - and you'll be able to laugh at each other when you can't shoot a single one of them in the sky. If you don't have a gun, don't worry - many shooting ranges have rental guns you can use, without a problem, and ammo you can purchase there. Spending the day shooting is a lot more fun than you'd expect!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

163 Go Coasteering

You'll never experience a date quite like this one! The latest extreme sport 'coasteering' is out of this world. It is usually done for half a day and costs about $100 each, but if you're looking for a date that will blow their mind, this is it!

Coasteering includes swimming through giant sea caves, flinging yourself off of sheer rock faces, and climbing up beautiful natural rock walls. Coasteering goes on whether the water is raging around you, or calm and peaceful - you'll never have the same experience twice, and it's an incredible way to spend the day with the one you care about!

164 Whodunnit?

How about throwing a dinner party with a difference? I've done this before and it is great fun. You can buy 'murder mystery' kits for your evening which are fantastic.

You each get a booklet with your character on and the background to that character and what to say. If you really want to get into character then give them out before the night so people can dress like their characters.

Then the host has a theme for the food depending on what type of kit you bought so you are all in the mood for an 'Italian gangster' night etc.

Then as you eat you have to ask specific questions from the booklet to people and they have to answer them based on the information they read about in the booklet, they can lie and trick you or be truthful and try to bluff you etc. Then at the end of the night you all have to choose 'whodunit' and see who was right! Lots of laughing and joking involved and a truly different experience - give it a try!

165 Playing With Sheep...

Here's an interesting one, how about approaching a local farmer and offering your services together for the day?

As long as they take you up on the offer then you can get to try all sorts of cool things that you wouldn't get to do normally. Like milking cows, rounding up sheep, driving a tractor, feeding chickens, playing with the farm dogs!

Even though it will be hard work it is a wonderful experience!

166 Be Famous...

You might want to do this in a town/city away from your home as you can relax more and won't get caught out by people you know.

Pick a famous person for your partner and they do the same for you, preferably someone each of your know about so you know how they act. Then spend the day acting like that person, use their catchphrases, if the person is loud and a bit of a flirt then that is how you need to act. If they are very regal and sophisticated then that is how you need to act.

People who meet you won't know you are acting they will just assume that is how you are (hence why you do it away from home) but your partner will be in stitches over your acting as they know how totally different you are acting.

It will leave you with lots of happy memories and stories to remind each other of and strengthen your bond together.

167 Announce Your Love to the World

It is getting easier than ever to set up a website, or how about a blog? You can set up a blog with about three clicks once you have some hosting (10 bucks a month of less). Then you just type straight into the blog and it gets published for you!

You could set up a blog about you and your partner, post photos on there for family and friends to see, maybe even use it to publish sweet messages to each other if you are apart - the possibilities are endless!

168 Go on a Blind Date

Do you remember when you first met? The thrill of getting to know the other person, the excitement of when you first held hands or kissed.

The nerves and the constant dance of a new relationship blossoming - it was fun looking back wasn't it?? Not knowing what the other person wanted or how they would react, now you know them inside out and all that thrill has gone…

So recreate it! Get your partner to go to a bar etc and then you go and you both have to act like you have never met before. Get to know each other, use fake details if that makes it more thrilling. Then seduce each other, go from the bar to a meal, try and bag that first touch, that first kiss.

Let the tension between you build as you flirt and play and then head home at the end of the night as you take her/him 'back to yours' for the night…

169 Swim With Dolphins

Dolphins are magical creatures (not literally) and seem to hold a special power over us. We think they are cute, we admire their intelligence, their playfulness and their grace in the water. We are constantly amazed by their actions (like circling a man who was stranded in the water with sharks nearby).

So what better way to treat your partner than to arrange to swim with them? Swimming with them in the sea is good, but less controlled and definitely not guaranteed, to make sure you get a good experience then the best way is to book into a sea life center that offers this and you get the clear water of the pool and the friendly attention of the resident dolphins - brownie points guaranteed!

170 Go Nude...

Hmmmm, a bit of a strange one this, but have you ever been to a nudist beach? No? Then it is a new experience!

Think of being free to just sit out in the sun completely free of any constricting clothes or inhibitions…

Scary? You bet. Enjoyable? Don't know - I have never been to one!

Give it a try though, you may find you really enjoy it and want to become a regular, just make sure you hit the gym a few months before you go…

171 Head Out Into the Unknown

Hop onto a train and ride it for a few hours (or a set number of stops, choose a random number), you'll probably need a ticket to somewhere miles away so you don't get chucked off...

Make sure you start this in the morning, because then you have to spend the rest of the day in the place you stopped at finding out about it and trying to find some accommodation for the night - then get back home the next day!

You get a fun day in somewhere you have no idea about and a bit of an adventure trying to get accommodation etc!

172 Have a Weird Time

How about something eccentric?

Like mashed potato wresting or canine freestyle dancing?

Seriously - it takes a lot to shock me now, did you know a guy in Alexandria has been putting one coat of paint onto a baseball every day since 1977? That teeny weeny baseball is now 104 inches in circumference and weighs 1100 pounds!

Or how about the toilet seat art museum?

You can find it all at eccentricamerica.com - just find something near you and pop along!

173 Strip Sudoku

Sudoku - such an innocent and simple game - not anymore!

Curl up together and play Sudoku - keep count of who gets the most digits right and the loser has to remove one item of clothing, then try another one until someone has nothing left to remove! Or until you both get distracted...

174 Storybook Romance

If you're bored one night, bring out a few notebooks and ask your partner to give you an idea for a story. Give them one too, and then spend a certain amount of time writing a short story on the topic you have been given.

You should make it as funny, or wild, as possible - even add yourselves into the story, and see what odd and quirky twists you can think of for it before you run out of ideas.

When you get tired of that, you can also try starting a story with a paragraph, then having them write the next paragraph. End it with something crazy and 'out there', so they'll have trouble finding a good way to continue, and then they'll do the same and try and catch you out! It's a great way to laugh away an evening together!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

175 I'm a Slave for You

Volunteer to be a slave for the night! Grab a bed sheet, along with a few safety pins, and make yourself a homemade toga. Set up the living or bedroom as an ancient paradise, and inform your partner that you'll be the one bowing to their every whim for the evening.

You can buy, or create a fan and fan them as you're feeding them grapes and getting them wine. Let them order you around that night, changing the channel or reading from a book, and make sure to fulfil every requirement... if you know what I mean.

You could also make them a dinner in the same theme, with heavy meats and delicious vegetables. Have fun with it, and they'll love the treat of being completely pampered... you never know what you might get in return!

176 Childhood Memories

Hop in the car - or rent one, if you have a drive and want something new - and drive to the places where you grew up. Show your partner the school that you went to, and drive past the house that you lived in. Take them to your old stomping grounds, and explain your favorite retreats, and why.

Then, stop at your old favorite restaurant and treat them to lunch, or dinner. It's such a fun trip, and you get to relive all of those good memories you had in that area!

The next time you go out, let them drive, and show you where they lived, and where they spent time growing up. Learn more about how they were as a child, and what it was like. It's a great bonding experience, and you can't pass up a trip to sit around and just talk.

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

177 Hot Air Ballooning

You've probably seen those sappy movies where the guy takes the girl in a hot balloon ride, and they see the entire city, and they fall in love... yeah, yeah, we get the idea, right? Well, have you ever considered taking your partner on one?

Prices have dropped dramatically over the last few years, and you can get a good professional take you up in one for a small fee. Everything looks so small from where you are, and it's a lot of fun - especially if they're afraid of heights, and cling to you throughout the entire trip.

Afterwards, treat them for being such a good sport by grabbing ice cream, or a light dinner. Their stomach might not be too settled after that trip though!

178 Small Town Charm

Go to a small town near yours, and spend time there. Nearly every area has a small, quaint town near it – within an hour's drive, at least. It should be somewhere you've spent little to no time before, and just hang out around town– enjoy yourself. Walk around the main roads and look at local landmarks, and visit homey mom-and-pop stores that have unique and odd items, and buy cute trinkets that you won't find anywhere else.

Spend time walking through the fields and admire the beauty and charm of a small town, too. You might never want to live in one, but it's always nice to visit and see the quiet charm it does offer. Eat at a local diner for dinner, and just enjoy yourself. It's a fun day, and something you've probably never done before!

179 Weekend of Fun

Clear events for an entire weekend, and spoil your partner rotten. Have fun with it – make an itinerary, and give it to them on a Friday. Remember to throw in surprises, and don't lack with the fun! If you make it too romantic, they may feel pressured; too fun, and you're stuck with them feeling like it was 'your weekend' that you simply let them tag along on.

You can do all sorts of things, from going rock climbing to giving them a facial, pampering them with a romantic dinner, and drawing bath water scented with roses, decked out with candles and a few good books. Spend the entire weekend with your partner. Really have fun pampering them, and you'll be rewarded.

180 Classics

We all have the sort of music we liked when we were growing up – ask your date to pick out old CDs, and pick a few of your classic favourites too. Download the ones that you can't find, or the songs on the CD that were scratched and torn up. Sit around with a glass of wine or tea and listen to the songs you used to know the lyrics to.

Feel free to make fun of their old favorites, as I'm sure they will yours, and talk about favorite TV shows and movies when you were a child. Reconnecting like this can strengthen your relationship, and bring you closer.

181 Design Your Own Board Game

This is a great joint activity that brings you closer as a couple, and will give you hours upon hours of fun. Bring out all of your favorite board games, those that you don't like, and some that you've never even looked at, and dump the pieces in the middle of the room. Using a big piece of paper and a pencil, design your own couples board game, based on the pieces and ideas you have.

Make sure to agree on all of the rules, and have everything written down. After everything is set, take the pieces and play! This is sure to create playful arguments, but remember not to take it too seriously. It's just a game!

182 Smooth and Creamy?

Grab numerous random ingredients from the store, and experiment with different smoothie flavors and mixtures. They're incredibly healthy, and it's a lot of fun in the kitchen – you might even find a new favorite, or rediscover an old classic. Sure... most of those that you try will probably be bad – but you can handle that, right?

Don't be afraid to try new and odd flavors, like chocolate banana strawberry nut, with a side of peanut butter and caramel. Remember to rinse your blender out between uses, and have plenty of ingredients for several different mixtures. When you've finally found a few good mixtures, sit back with a good movie and hang out together.

183 With The Top Down...

Does the forecast predict sunny skies and warm air? Spring for a convertible for the day, and drive around talking, laughing, and listening to your favorite music or just the radio. Make sure to keep the top down, as that's the best part of the entire trip! Sure, it may seem elaborate, but they'll love the idea and you'll love driving around in a smooth ride!

If you live by a beach, it would also be romantic to drive them down there – even if it's a few hours away – and watch the sun set with your toes in the sand and an arm around each other. Bring a picnic, or spring for delicious boardwalk treats – don't be afraid to go all out!

184 Gold Digger? Never!

See if you can find somewhere close that will let you pan for gold – really! Even if gold isn't as common as it was a hundred years ago, there are many places that still have deposits. Either try to find a stream that's rumoured to have the beautiful treasure, or go somewhere that will teach you how to pan and find your gold.

With your feet in the water, the warm sun on your back, and your partner next to you, it's a fun way to enjoy nature and spend time together. You never know what you might find, too – so never give up that gold dream!

185 It's Showtime!

Grab a camcorder, and write out a type of script – any type of script at all. It could be your very own short movie, or a music video to your favorite song... or even just a short commercial for something you have around the house. Have fun with it, and don't take it too seriously – it's for laughs, remember!

Decide if you're going to show it to friends and family, or keep it as a private enjoyment item. It builds incredible memories, and you'll have it with you to remind yourself of the beautiful, loving relationship you've built. Besides, you'll be surprisingly embarrassed if you ever show it to anyone else, and it's always there for laughs.

186 Remodelled

Pick a room – any room – and decide what you want to do with it. Make it a weekend project, and remodel it, complete with paint, new finishings and more. Pick up tips online, or even buy a few specialty magazines with great ideas for remodelling. This is a great way to spend a lot of time together, and really doing something fun and exciting.

It also improves your home, and makes it something you can appreciate. Always have fun, and try to avoid real arguments about colors, patterns, and 'what-goes-where' discussions. If you enjoy yourself, the room will turn out well no matter what.

187 Support Your Town

Find out when local little leagues are playing, and go watch a game. Make sure you both decide to support different teams, so you can tease each other and root.

Not only are you making the kids feel good by coming out, but it's a lot of fun to spend time with each other. Maybe you're not that into sports, but your partner is – or vice versa. You still get to spend time with your interests, and enjoy each other's company.

Afterwards, consider a traditional sports dinner – go home, or to a diner, and have either hot dogs, or burgers, with a side of fries. How can you go wrong with a traditional, fun outing like this!

188 Ride 'Round Town

Make sure your bikes are in tip top shape – your tires are full of air, and everything is secure – and drive out to a local trail to spend the afternoon talking and riding. Start with an easier trail, so you can really enjoy it, instead of concentrating solely and staying on the trail and away from that 40 foot drop to your left. You could race, or just enjoy nature as you ride along.

If you've been on this trail before, bring a picnic lunch and rest in an opening. Enjoy the each other's company, and remember to have fun!

189 GameDay

Snag an old gaming console to play with. No, I don't mean PlayStation old - I mean SNES old. We're talking the beginnings of the home gaming systems.

This is the challenging part. Once you have the console, you're good to go. But finding the console is hard! You should start your search in the nearby gaming stores. Not the big chains, either, because they don't carry even the last generation of games - certainly not the first.

If you're having issues, go on eBay - you're sure to find it there!

Order pizza, and settle down with a plethora of games. Grab some old ones that are your favorite - like the classic Mario - and some titles you haven't played before. You can buy the games at local game shops, or online.

Grab some soda and a slice of pizza. Sit in front of your TV and enjoy the classics of gaming - you will both have a lot of fun!

190 Family Tree

Researching your family tree is great fun! Some people get totally addicted to this. You need to choose first which family you are going to research, to save any arguments I recommend that as you are suggesting this idea that you research their family first. The good side of that is that you look really sweet for offering that, but in reality you get to iron out all the kinks in the process and learn what to do so when you start on your family it goes a lot smoother! ;)

Then research your history online! Take the basics that you know - your mother's maiden name, where your grandparents originally lived, etc, and find all of the information you can. Compile a family history going back as far as you can. It's a fun, educational way to spend the day.

Use ancestry.com/.co.uk to help you out if you get stuck, you will have to pay, but if that saves you hours of frustration then it will be well worth it!

191 Public Trial

Call your local courthouse and find out when there's a public trial going on. Then head over there and see what is going on.

Listen to all the evidence and see if you can decide which way the judge/jury are going to go, or of course make your own judgment!

Remember to respect the courthouse rules, maybe take a pad and a pen so you can communicate without making too much noise.

Then once you get outside the confines of the courthouse head for some food and discuss everything that went on!

192 Color Me Magic

Go to the library, and take out every book you can on magic tricks - or, you can try to be a little more specialized, and choose something like card tricks or coin tricks.

Then, drag them back to your house and start learning those tricks! It's not easy, so don't get frustrated. And certainly don't try to impress anyone by attempting the big, complicated trick first... it's not worth the hassle and frustration you'll experience with it. Trust me on this one.

Set up dinner-and-a-movie that night for your friends, and have everyone come over. Show off your bad magic tricks, woo them with worse jokes, and please them with good food. It's fun. A little silly, sure, but what good things in life aren't?

193 $3 Meal

Head to the supermarket, but be prepared - jump online and see how cheap you can find some great meals... or even some not so great meals. Whatever tickles your fancy!

Grab a trolley, and your partner, and see who can find the best meal for under $3. You've got $1 for your appetizer, $1 for your main course, and $1 for dessert. Yes, just $1 for each meal section - no, you can't cheat! No spending any more than what you've allotted on a meal.

Take it all home, and see how well you both can cook up your cheap treat. If it ends up tasting bad, order takeout and try again next date - if it tastes good, make it a regular meal!

194 Wine Making

Go to your library and grab every book you can find about making wine, and go through them all.

If you can't find any at your local library, head online and search for information on making your homemade wine. Remember to print out your information, or write it down somewhere so that you can easily reference it.

Then, go out and grab all of your supplies. If you're having issues finding everything, plan ahead and order supplies from the internet - you're sure to find them there.

Spend the day and make your own wine. Homemade wine, when made correctly, isn't just better for you as a whole... it's actually quite good! Now it is going to take months to mature, but think of the satisfaction after the wait as you both spend the night in with a few glasses of your own homemade wine and a nice meal ☺

195 Balloon Animals

Go online and print out everything that you can find about making balloon animals with sausage balloons - you know, the long, sort of skinny balloons. If you can't find anything online, don't worry - your library should have something, and if not, a bookstore near you might have a 'kit' with the balloons and everything.

If you don't have any balloons laying around, or just not enough, head to a craft store and buy sausage balloons. As many as you can - you're going to want quite a few actually.

Then, take everything home and try your hand at making your very own balloon animals. Spend hours trying to craft a doggy, giraffe, and other odd blow up creatures. Make sure you prepare for plenty of balloons to be blown up!

Afterwards, take your partner out to a fun, silly meal - somewhere that you can laugh and joke and not be stared at. This is a really great, fun date that most anyone with an inner child will truly appreciate.

196 Casino Trip

Get dressed for a big night! Going to a casino can be a lot of fun, even if you only rarely gamble, and you're not too skilled at card games. Make sure to plan ahead, and let them know that this is no casual visit - dress up.

If you're a guy wear a nice, dark suit and if you're a lady wear a nice little cocktail dress. Trust me, you'll both get a kick out of dressing up.

Head out and spend the night gambling away your hard earned dollars. The slot machines are easy to play, but can get dull. Card games can be complicated, but are a lot of fun. Roulette is my favorite!

Don't have a casino around? Set everything up, and invite your friends over - hold a casino night of your own, and make sure everyone knows to dress up!

197 Be a Celebrity

Wonder what it would be like to be a celebrity, riding around in a stretch limo, complete with champagne and a beautiful partner? Well, you've got the partner - now you just need the limo!

For a date that you're sure to remember, rent a limo for the day. You can get great discounts on the off times (Basically, when ever it's not prom or home coming), so the price shouldn't be too bad. Go around your town and look at landmarks, and your old stomping grounds.

Then, head to dinner in your new ride. After eating, ask the driver to take you around several blocks, so you can sit in the back talking, laughing, and spending time with each other.

Luxurious? Sure! Excessive? Possibly. But it's a lot of fun, and your dates not going to forget it anytime soon.

198 First Aid

First aid is important - it's something you need to learn, for one, and it can come in handy... you never know whose life you're going to save with a first aid class.

Take your partner to a first aid class, and learn the basics - how to treat wounds, CPR, and more. Pay attention... you're supposed to have fun, of course, but if you come from the class not learning anything, it's sort of silly, don't you think?

Afterwards, take your partner out for a quiet dinner, and talk about what you learned - and watch for anyone choking! Put your newfound knowledge to good use.

199 Learn to Freedive

Freediving is a wonderful sport where you dive without a tank. The world record is over 200 metres (using sleds to get down to that depth quickly) so don't think this is just diving down in shallow water. The record for holding their breath underwater is over 9 minutes!

Basically you learn how to hold your breath for longer, how to cope with the pressure of diving to depth etc. Then once you have trained up you can dive the coral reefs on holiday without a tank etc!

Different and fun!

200 Grab a Bargain

I remember growing up around car boot sales. There is an innocent fun about these that is hard to explain. You usually end up coming away with a boatload of stuff you would never have thought of buying before but because it was 'so cheap' then you had to get it.

It is good to look around at all the different things people have bought over the years and you can get some real nostalgic stuff which will put a huge smile on your face (for about a day) and some real bargains for things that you do need.

Just make sure that you go early as the hardcore 'booters' will snap everything good up early if they can.

201 Leave a Legacy

Ever thought of making a time capsule? Actually I wouldn't recommend that, I'd recommend buying one else everything inside will probably be destroyed by the time you get it back (unless you use a sturdy airtight container you just happen to have lying around).

Then sit down one night with your partner and put lots of notes in it about things, put in pictures, maybe some trinkets etc, all things that remind you of where you are now and where you came from.

Then bury it either in the loft of the garden and wait for you or your kids to find it in years to come - imagine opening it after 10 years and going through it!

202 Really Get to Know Your Partner

Spend an evening discussing what each of you think about in certain situations like when in a new environment or when driving etc.

Maybe you want to find out what they think/worry about when they start a new job or when you don't contact them when you are working late.

This will give you a deep insight into your partner and they will have the same for you and you will forge an even closer bond.

If you know your partner is worried when entering a new environment about getting separated from you, then you can makes sure you don't leave them alone etc. Or if they are worried about you saying something about their weight/hair/habit of biting their fingernails in front of friends, then knowing that will make you a much better partner (as long as you take note of it and use that info).

203 Experience the Thrill of Your First Piercing

I remember my first piercing... that sweet mix of nerves, pain and then endorphins as the needle slices through your skin... not to mention the jubilation of having something different to look at in the mirror...

Why not go and have a piercing together? Two eyebrows or maybe something more risqué, you can have almost anything pierced so you could just have a bar put through the skin on your wrist etc... but it is probably best to start off with something more normal - how about an eyebrow for a guy and a tongue for the lady?

204 Make Your Own Documentary

This one is sure to get some laughs from both of you and your friends when you show them the video… Borrow a video camera and pretend you are making a documentary, then go out and approach people to ask if you can have a minute of their time to ask some questions for the documentary.

Some will bite and be really hyped they are getting on this documentary which they assume will go onto YouTube etc, then ask people really random questions and see their reaction, like what do people think about the current state of oranges, or how would you react to being turned into a milkshake? Keeping a straight face is difficult but essential so that they try to answer the question rather than just storming off!

Then take it home and show everyone!

205 Go on a Real Treasure Hunt

Think you can find buried treasure? It is out there, recently in the UK a father and son stumbled across a Viking hoard of gold worth about £750,000 in a farmer's field!

They have to split the money 50/50 with the farmer but I am sure they don't mind that much!

All you need is a metal detector and the permission of the land owner, then you get out there and at every beep you dig and find out what the detector found - if you like hunting for treasure then this is a must!

Article on the find

206 Head Underground

How about getting down into the heart of the Earth and enjoying the sport of potholing/spelunking/caving?

Basically you find a cave (usually already scouted by others so you know it is safe) and then a group of you explore it, which usually involves climbing up parts of it, using ropes to get up sheer cliff faces, crawling through small spaces, wading through underground lakes and streams, all good stuff!

I am trying this later in the year as it sounds loads of fun, just make sure you partner is ok with physical exertion and small spaces…

207 Go Old School Fishing

Sometimes it is good to get away from all the complex technology of modern life.

Go old school and just take some fishing line and hooks and a knife with you, then go to somewhere good for fishing, get sticks to make into rods and use the line and hooks and whatever bait you can find lying around, then try and catch something!

Even if you don't catch something you will have a simple and relaxing time together enjoying the sun and the sound of the water!

208 Have a Competition on the Beach

We all love a bit of healthy competition!

How about hitting the beach and trying to make the biggest sandcastle that you can, or working together to make one.

Let's face it, when you are a kid you can only make little upturned buckets of sand because you lack the skills to match your imagination, now you can go wild and make a huge castle and bask in the glory!

Or try and dig the deepest hole possible like I used to when I was a kid…

209 Shhhhhhh....

Try having a silent date where you can't talk at all during the date (or limit it to an hour if you can't take it), you have to mime if you want something or write it out.

It is definitely going to lead to a breakdown into a lot of laughter and probably a playfight after some misunderstandings!

While your partner can't talk you get to tease them, try and tickle them and get them to make a noise, make the person who first breaks the silence have to do a forfeit!

210 Have a Day in Bed

Spend the day/night in bed being lazy (you deserve a break)

We all spend so much time looking for cool things to do, how about doing nothing? Sometimes it feels so good to vegetate, think about nothing in particular, do nothing in particular, and just laze around watching TV and relaxing!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

211 Respect Your Elders

We never have time for other people nowadays, we joke about old people telling us stories of their lives during the war etc. I know I have dismissed them before, I'm usually caught up in something as the neighbour comes across to regale me with one of his stories so I listen with half an ear.

How about taking a plate of homemade food (cookies, cakes, sandwiches etc) with you and go to visit an home for the elderly and talk with them for the afternoon about their lives and really listen, you never know you might make some good friends that way, and you will certainly have a lot of good stories to hear!

212 Give Your Date a Theme

I talked earlier about using a letter for the date to make you be creative, well how about giving your dates another theme?

The person who is organizing the date has to take direction from the other person. Give your day/date a theme by giving it a color or other characteristic that you have to follow throughout the day. Like an orange date would involve all orange like drinking orangeade, getting all dressed up in orange, eating Tikka Masala (it is orange when I do it!) and oranges.

Or you could have a liquid date where you go swimming, then have soup together and have a bath etc, it is great fun trying to find ways to continue the theme!

213 Become a Birdmaster

Birds of prey, awe inspiring creatures, both beautiful and deadly.

The art of falconry started around 700BC and it involves training a bird of prey to hunt on command and to return to the falconer and land on the leather glove they have to protect their hand from the talon of the bird.

You can take a falconry course together and get an introduction to this art and get up close with these amazing birds, courses are done for half a day or a full day and you will get the chance to hold and fly a number of different birds.

214 Sensible Drinking

Pretty much everyone drinks wine nowadays, but do you know the difference between a Cabernet and a Merlot? Or a Chardonnay and a Muscat?

Whether you just want to further your knowledge for your own pleasure, or you want to impress your friends and colleagues with your newfound sophistication, then a wine tasting course could be just what you need.

As long as your partner likes wine then this is a great day out, you get a nice friendly atmosphere, in a small group you get to taste all sorts of wines and get taken through the different kinds and what to look for in a good wine.

No longer will you settle for that $4 bottle of wine from the little shop down the road!

215 Help Out Some Little Ones

Kids have an infectious innocence and happiness. They race around all the time and they find the most frivolous things fun. Sometimes it is good just to be around them and forget about your adult responsibilities.

Volunteer to help out at a school, maybe with a play or open day and you can not only do a good deed, but you get to absorb the festivities and fun of the day with your partner.

216 Going, Going, Gone!

Auctions are a real experience, I have been to some where the auctioneer was speaking so fast I couldn't hear what was going on and missed my lot, where others ones the auctioneer seemed to drag things on forever until he sold the lot and I almost fell asleep and missed my lot!

Attend an auction together and bid on something for the house, or something you think you can sell on for a profit. You need to bid on something to get into the atmosphere, so just bid on some really cheap junk as a memento of your date!

217 Become a Swinger

Ever have a swing in the backyard when you were a kid?

If you have a tree in your backyard now then make a swing, either a traditional one or a tyre swing, you will have great fun making it and using it and it will last for years as an enduring symbol of your love.

...just make sure the branch can take your weight now that you are adults and weigh a bit more!

218 Have an Evening of Song and Dance

Musicals are good fun, they are more interactive than a film as you can sing along to them, and they tend to be very upbeat and happy so you always feel good watching them (as opposed to some horror or war film which may scar you for life!).

Hire a few good musicals from your local rental store and have a musical evening full of song and dance, get some popcorn, close the curtains even if it is light outside, and then sing your heart out and enjoy a happy evening with your partner.

219 Build a Raft

Building things together is like Marmite, you either love it or you hate it. Either you are the kind of couple who will happily build things together or one of you drives the other mad when you attempt to work together, if you are the latter then this will not be a good idea!

If you think you can handle it then, build a raft together out of whatever you can find and then try it out on a local lake etc - take care with this one, lifejackets and common sense are needed!

220 Relive that Sweet Time Together

This is perfect for an anniversary and will score you some big brownie points!

Don't let your partner know what you are up to, just tell them you are going out somewhere and tell them what to dress up like.

Then recreate your first date together in every detail that you can - try to reminisce about the first date and how things have changed, laugh at the goofy things you both said and how nervous you were and how happy you are now.

Of course if your first date was to McDonalds as you didn't have any money, or maybe it was in school and you went to a local park or something… then you might want to recreate your first proper date (i.e. choose a decent one near the start of the relationship you can recreate).

221 Get Wrinkly Together

Are you a bath or a shower person? What is your partner? If you both like baths then surprise your partner by not only running a bath for them, but by then getting into it with them and spending a night together in the tub!

Get some magazines and books, put some candles around the place and spend the night in the bathtub talking together, have soft music playing etc for a good effect.

Then when you get out you can have a nice meal together and veg on the couch!

222 Pin the Tail on the Celeb

Most places have at least a few celebrities nearby, even if it is just the local celebrity like the millionaire property developer.

Go celeb hunting, hunt people down online, find out where you can catch them, maybe head to a different town if you need to. Then seek them out and try and get their autograph.

Maybe even try and get some advice off them about how to follow in their footsteps if that is where you or your partner want to head!

223 Role Reversal

This is a dodgy one to pull off. Try to switch roles for the evening - if you usually cook then make them do it, if they always hog the remote then you do it. If you always watch what you want to then let them watch what they want to etc.

This can be great fun as you can poke fun at your partner and earn a few gentle punches in the process, just make sure you don't take this time to criticise them by imitating them in a bad way, do poke fun, just don't get personal!

224 Midnight Hike

We've all been on a hike - right? So how about mixing things up and taking a midnight hike - try it out in a national park - take torches so you don't fall down a hole etc.

You get to spend time together in the peace and quiet of the night and also see things from a different perspective. You will see the stars (when there are no clouds) and see wildlife you normally wouldn't.

Not to mention you get to sit down and read each other ghost stories in the middle of a clearing and scare the crap out of each other!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

225 Try & Be Famous

Ever been told you look like someone famous?

Try and find some famous people you do or could look like. Dress up as much like them as you can and then book yourself into a theatre or restaurant under their names and see people's reactions!

As your partner will not resemble the partner of the celeb then you will probably start some gossip when you book that person in with another celeb who they are not seeing...

Don't think you are going to fool anyone, but just watch them looking out for a celeb turning up and then see their faces when you reveal you are that person!

226 Funny Pictures

If you have a digital camera then you can spend the day out and about trying to take the weirdest and funniest pictures of each other you can.

Try and interact with things like lampposts and fountains etc in really funny ways, or try and get other member of the public involved in your game, have a great time doing it, you have nothing to lose!

Then take them in for one hour processing (or stick them on your computer with a digital camera) and then spend the evening laughing at them all and vote on the best.

227 Coffee Nirvana

Coffee is great, I love it! I'm not a coffee connoisseur by any stretch of the imagination, but I do like a good coffee.

Head out on a quest to find the best coffee in the area, jump from place to place testing the coffee and laughing and joking, try decaff so you don't bug out on caffeine!

Don't limit yourselves to coffeeshops, try restaurants, pubs and bars too to give yourself a nice variety.

228 Learn From the Past

Learn something more about yourself and your partner at the same time. Go to the library or use the internet and give each other a few hours to research what went on in the year your partner was born, find out what was in the news, who was born who is famous now, who died etc.

Then compile a short document for the other person to print and take them through it all over a bottle of wine that night.

It will give you something to cherish and keep and also give you an insight into how old your partner truly is because even if they are only a few years older/younger than you then there could have been things going on or things missing from their childhood that you took for granted.

229 Make Sweet Music Together

Do you have a song for your relationship? You know, one that you both go gooey over?

How about making your own one up instead? You can have your own words which are more meaningful and have the pleasure of knowing you write it together.

As long as one of you can play a musical instrument then try and compose a song together complete with lyrics, record a copy of it on your computer once you have finished for posterity and then you can burn a copy to keep.

230 Fall From the Sky

It doesn't get more extreme than throwing yourself out of a plane at 20,000 feet!

Some people love it, others would never dream of it, go skydiving and get your hearts thumping!

You can do an accelerated freefall course where you get to jump by yourself, it usually lasts a day for training and then you get to jump the next morning.

Or you can do a tandem jump where you are strapped to the instructor (not as good but still scary!)

Or even a static line jump where you jump yourself after not much training, but a cord attached to the plane pulls your chute as you exit the plane so you don't get any 'freefall'.

Probably best to check with your partner before you try and surprise them with this one…

231 Drive a Ferrari

Driving a supercar is exhilarating!

Almost everyone has dreamed of driving a shiny supercar at some time. They are expensive and desirable, the domain of the rich and they go like the clappers, so it is understandable we all want a go in one!

Well for just $200+ each you can have a go in one (or two, or more, depending on your package) on a supercar experience day. You get usually three laps of a racetrack in the car of your choice, I have one coming up in a few months in a Lamborghini Murcielago and a Lamborghini Gallardo - if your partner and you like cars this is a superb date!

232 Go and Get Some 'Art'

Just like the piercing earlier, getting a tattoo is thrilling.

To answer everyone's question then it does hurt a little bit! Although with a good artist it doesn't hurt much, but it still stings a bit, mainly when they are doing the outline!

Choose out a small tattoo each and get it done, if one watches the other have it then they probably won't have it done themselves, so go to somewhere that has two artists and get them done together!

…and please please please do not get them of each other's names!

Brought to you by www.WildSexSecrets.com

233 Be Big Kids

Like some of the other this date is about bringing out the child in your who loves to laugh and smile.

Go to McDonalds and enjoy a kids meal together (happy meal etc) and sit in the play area and eat it! Also make sure to get out the free toy and play with that!

Then head to the cinema and get some sweets instead of popcorn, go on, you know you want to!

234!

Are You Spiderman or Wonderwoman?

The final one, ok, spend the night together with a bottle of wine and pads of paper. Think about what kind of superheroes you could be.

Which current superhero would you like to be and why? What would you use their powers to do? How about your partner?

If you could make up your own superhero what powers would they have? What would they be called and what would they dress like (hence the need for paper).

You can have a great time with this, and even carry it across into the bedroom…
